You Will Hear the King. Antonio Has a Monkey. Good Mexican News. Not Football, Brain Work.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHEN KING GEORGE, on the radio, opens the economic world conference in London, June 12, all the world, except possibly China and Japan, will hear a cultivated voice saying pleasant things, carefully prepared by the British government.

The United States is glad that its President will listen in Washington, not sitting with other delegates in England.

Putting on airs nationally is not desirable, but the suggestion that President Roosevelt should imitate Wilson and go abroad for this conference was not pleasing to Americans. You cannot imagine the British king and emperor, or the president of France, coming here.

ANTONIO MASTRICO, 57, has one hand-organ, one small monkey. The monkey has a little red cap with a feather, and a red suit of clothes. Monkey, organ and Antonio combined to make fairly good living for Antonio.

But "cruelty society" agents saw that when the monkey climbed for a penny, Antonio jerked a little chain around the monkey's neck, to remind him to take off his little red hat. The monkey always forgot about that, because where he came from they don't take off hats. The judge said, "Yes, that is cruel," fined Antonio two dollars, told him to leave the monkey at home.

KINDNESS TO animals is upheld. Antonio is rebuked. But who will feed the monkey, and how will Antonio make a living?

If only justice would be as much excited about thousands of children worked long hours in sweatshops. That condition seems as cruel as jerking a monkey's neck to teach it good manners.

THE COMMISSION from Mexico to President Roosevelt ends its visit satisfactorily. The President and Mr. Pani, in a joint statement, predict a revival of normal trade between the United States and Mexico, much to be desired.

More attention to Mexico, less bothering about countries far away, would help the United States. Mexico was well described long ago by a great German scientist as "the treasure house of the world." Its resources, in precious and other metals, fertility of soil, high quality of its labor, cannot be exaggerated.

There is talk in this country of dangerously diminishing iron ores. Near Mexico City is a mountain of iron that would supply the North American continent for a long time.

WHAT North Americans should wish and work for is close union in trade and friendship of Mexico, the United States, Canada. The three North American nations, united, always friends, would form a "League of American Nations," impregnable.

Mexico has silver, also much gold. Canada has great quantities of gold. The United States, strangely enough, has the MONEY and already developed industry.

Those three nations, closely united, would be as independent of the rest of the world as this earth is independent of its neighbors in space, Mars, Venus, Mercury, Neptune and the rest.

LAST FALL, Harvard played football against West Point. West Point won. Special trains, thousands of automobiles, tens of thousands of people crowded to witness that.

Yesterday, West Point and Harvard began a two-day contest in mathematics, competing in analytical geometry and calculus, first contest of its kind between colleges.

WILL THOUSANDS of automobiles, tens of thousands of people on special trains attend this brain competition? The answer to that will tell historians ten thousand years hence about civilization in 1933.

If you had a tree-climbing contest among monkeys, the monkeys would all be there. If you had a contest requiring thought, nobody would come. Why resent the suggestion that we are like monkeys?

GANDHI, THE determined, on the thirteenth day of his fast, and growing weaker, of course, is still intent on his plan to rebuke India's horrible "untouchable" caste system. Doctors say:

"Gandhi, at sixty-four, is as fit as a man of forty."

And there is a lesson there for American business men that die too soon because they eat too much, and start work immediately after eating. An intelligent doctor said:

"One half of what we eat keeps us alive. The other half kills us."

One-third of what the average prosperous American eats would keep him alive and make him live longer.

WALTER C. TEAGLE, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, quotes oil production figures "showing great excess of crude oil over current requirements." Our oil industry, run on the "helter-skelter" plan, like other American industries, is now dissipating one of the nation's most important assets.

President Roosevelt intends to do something about that, and a "czar" may be appointed for the oil industry, to prevent childish waste. Mr. Teagle finds the present trouble due partly to inadequate laws and laxity of officials.

PAUL D. CRAVATH, one of the ablest lawyers in America, urges recognition of Soviet Russia, basing his conclusions on "long reflection and two visits to

Duggan to Be Councilman

HERRON SEAT FOR HEAD OF ICE FIRM

Organization to Name Business and Civic Leader Monday

Frank L. Duggan, director and general manager of the Consolidated Ice Company and chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, will be named to City Council Monday.

Mr. Duggan will fill the vacancy created when John S. Herron succeeded Charles H. Kline as mayor.

Council will hold a special meeting at 1:30 p. m.

Duggan will have the votes of Councilmen William J. Soost, George S. Oliver, Harry A. Little, Clifford B. Connelly and W. Y. English. There was no intimation how Councilmen R. J. McArdle, Robert Garland and Charles Anderson will vote.

Duggan lives at 2916 Shady avenue. He has been active in civic affairs for many years.

FIGHT RENEWED ON WOODFIN

The Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, former volunteer dry agent, must fight before the Monongehela Presbytery to retain his pastorate of the wealthy Third United Presbyterian Church, Northumberland street and Shady avenue.

The Presbytery has been asked to permit an appeal from the recent congregational vote which stood 270 to 86 in favor of Dr. Woodfin remaining.

Petitions bearing several hundred signatures of members, many of them not present at the meeting, are said to be ready for presentation to the Presbytery. These ask a review of the case, it is said.

Dr. Woodfin charged the elders with holding secret meetings and criticizing him unjustly, and offered to resign if the congregation desired it. The congregation meets Wednesday to elect new elders.

A commission to investigate conditions in the Third church likely will be the outcome when the presbytery meets Monday, it was indicated.

Coolidge Kin Hurt In Crash in Italy

LONDON, May 20.—(INS.)—A Miss Coolidge, described by an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Turin, Italy, as a relative to the former president of the United States, was severely injured in an automobile accident while traveling from Venice to Gardone today.

The car in which Miss Coolidge was riding with the composer, Francesco Malipiero, and his wife, collided with another near Marostica and somersaulted.

GENEVA, May 20.—With the hurdle of Germany's acceptance of the British disarmament plan already accomplished, the United States was held up today as the guiding force to successful conclusion of the disarmament conference.

In an address before the general commission of the conference, Dr. Giuseppe Motta, former president of Switzerland, declared:

"It is now up to the United States to pull the conference through."

LENGTHY SPEECH

In a lengthy speech, Motta congratulated President Roosevelt and Chancellor Adolf Hitler on their peaceful declarations, which have given the conference a greater impetus than it has received in months.

He also complimented Rudolph Nadolny, chief German delegate,

FORBES FIELD, May 20.—The home of the Pittsburgh Pirates held one of the biggest crowds of the season this afternoon as George Gibson's league leaders prepared to swap punches with Bill McKechnie's classy Braves, of Boston. The occasion was the first doubleheader of the home season, and as early as noon the fans were pouring through the turnstiles.

Many an old-time lover of the diamond sport journeyed to the Oakland Orchard today to enjoy the antics of the perennial Rabbit Maranville, former Pirate star and now one of McKechnie's aces, who has been doing his stuff in the big show for more than 20 years. The Rabbit yesterday upset the Bucos' applecart with a squeeze play and a series of whirlwind stops. The Braves won, 5-3.

Manager Gibson had two of his righthand slab aces—Heinie Meine and Bill Swift—primed for mound starts in the dual bill. Skipper McKechnie expected to call upon Huckleberry Betts and Ben Cantwell, also righthanders.

The Brooklyn Dodgers will be in town Monday to open a series with the Pirates.

3 MORE RACKET THREATS SENT TO PROBERS

Campaign of Terror Continues as U. S. Enters Inquiry

Announcement that United States Postal Inspector L. C. Kennedy today is investigating the source of threatening letters to directors of the Better Business Bureau came today as three more directors received warnings.

Gangland seemed intent on striking back at the Bureau as it demanded the resignation of unnamed but substantial business men from the directorate of the organization.

The letters, printed in blue pencil on cheap paper, were in the hands of Kennedy. All had apparently been mailed at the same box.

Meanwhile, the directorate unhurriedly planned to meet next Friday to discuss the extent of their operations against racketeers declared to be depriving legitimate businessmen of millions of dollars a year in Pittsburgh.

Mailing of eight threatening notes followed Thursday's campaign of telephone calls threatening Capt. Reuel W. Elton and four directors unless G. H. Dennison, fraud investigator for the bureau, is fired at once. Dennison was still at work this morning.

Gangland bombers in another quarter seemed safe meanwhile, as detectives reported little or no progress in their search for persons who left two bombs in front of the home of James Bishop, chairman of the Eleventh Ward's Third district, Thursday night.

Meanwhile, two men were fined today for soliciting memberships in an automobile club, called by detectives a "racket." The fines were for soliciting without a permit and without approval of the City Solicitor.

The men are Jack Cutler, 42, and Harry Gelsman, 38, both of the Fort Pitt Hotel. For $19.75, City Detective William Sullivan says, they offered membership in an auto club.

PROFIT TO WIFE, MITCHELL AIM

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—A contention that Charles E. Mitchell, former international banker, aimed at a substantial profit for his wife when he sold her 18,300 shares of stock at $212 a share, lay before the jury today in Mitchell's trial on charges of tax evasion.

The stock slid to $40 a share, however, and Mitchell bought it back at $212. The prosecution contends the sale was one of the alleged "shams" whereby Mitchell established huge losses and escaped income taxes totaling $850,000.

Federal Attorney Medalie yesterday questioned Edward F. Barrett, vice president of the National City Bank, which Mitchell formerly headed. Questioned about what Mitchell said at the time of selling the 18,300 shares of the bank's stock, which he had bought at a figure much higher than $212, Barrett said:

"He told me that he believed she would be able to make a handsome profit on the stock and said that would compensate her for some losses she sustained in the crash. At the time I agreed. Mr. Mitchell also told me that by making the sale he would avoid any income tax for the year."

The trial, in recess today, is to resume Monday.

INDUSTRY GETS IN SHAPE FOR F. R. CONTROL

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—The oil industry protested against the proposed increase in the federal gasoline tax today to the House Ways and Means Committee, at hearings on the revenue section of the Public Works-Industry Recovery bill.

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Confident of enactment of the administration's gigantic industrial control and public works bill, many industries are today taking preliminary steps to bring themselves within the scope of the measure.

As the House Ways and Means Committee neared conclusion of its public hearings on the measure, information reached the White House and members of Congress that trade agreements will be ready for presentation to President Roosevelt for approval within 10 days after the measure becomes law.

Preliminary meetings of lumber manufacturers were opened here today, and Congressional representatives of bituminous coal areas announced the coal industry would speedily organize.

Approval of the industrial control features, which modify the anti-trust laws to permit industry and labor to fix minimum wages, regulate hours of labor and establish codes of fair practice, was held certain in the Ways and Means Committee.

Means of raising the $220,000,000 in taxes to finance the proposed $3,300,000,000 bond issue was the chief problem to be carried into secret session by the committee late today.

Chairman Doughton (Dem.), of North Carolina, hoped a completed bill could be presented to Congress Monday.

The drive for enactment of a manufacturers' sales tax to finance the bond issue gained impetus as a result of the recommendation of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor that such a levy be included in the taxing provisions.

In view of the bitter opposition of organized labor in the past to a manufacturers' excise tax, it appeared likely the levy will receive more serious consideration than was expected at first.

Car Loadings Rise Above Year Ago

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—Loadings of revenue freight reported by the railroads of the country to the American Railway Association for the week ended May 13 showed today an increase over the previous year for the first time in several years.

Loadings totaled 531,095 cars, a gain of 7,276 above the preceding week and 13,835 above the same week in 1932.

PRESIDENT ASKS OIL CONTROL

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today requested immediate Congressional consideration of oil control legislation.

In a letter to Vice President Garner and Speaker Rainey he also suggested that the legislation be made a part of the pending industrial supervision bill, "in order to save time."

The bill introduced yesterday by Representative Marland (Dem.), of Oklahoma, would seek to lift up the industry by authorizing Secretary Ickes for two years to fix prices, hours of labor and wages as well as limit production to demand.

The President's text follows:

"As the Congress is doubtless aware, a serious situation confronts the oil producing industry.

"Because oil taken from the

SEARCHERS UNCOVER NO CLUES TO BANKER

Federal Investigator Doubts Financier Killed Self

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Mystery surrounding the disappearance of Joseph W. Harriman, founder of the closed Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, deepened today as a far-flung police hunt failed to reveal any trace of his movements.

Harriman, aged and enfeebled, who was scheduled to go on trial here Monday on charges of falsifying the bank's accounts to the extent of $1,661,170, penned half a dozen suicide notes yesterday before vanishing from the Regent Nursing home, in East Sixty-First street, where he had been undergoing treatment for nervous and physical ailments.

U. S. JOINS HUNT

Co-operating with the police were the Federal authorities. The government officials, however, seemed less inclined to believe that Harriman was bent on self-destruction, harrassed though he was at the prospect of his impending trial.

Thomas F. Cullen, special agent in the New York office of the United States Bureau of Investigation, was in charge of the Federal search at the direction of J. Edgar Hoover, director, and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Cullen planned to question not only employes and officials of the Regent Nursing Home, but also George S. Leisure and Col. William J. Donovan, Harriman's attorneys, and various members of his family in the Harriman home.

Police threw out a dragnet, searched the East River, watched the highways, ferryboats, railroad trains and ocean liners, but hours after the banker's disappearance there were only vague clues.

WATCH CEMETERY

The trail led from the Regent Nursing Home, Harriman's only home after his personal fortune was wiped out with the closing of his bank, to his son's grave in Locust Valley, L. I., on the theory that Harriman might kill himself near this spot.

Suicide was his intention, according to Leisure, who told of the banker's leaving the notes in his room at the sanitarium. Grief would have led him to the Locust Valley Cemetery, it was believed, because he never recovered from the death of his son, Joseph W. Harriman, Jr., in 1928.

Although detectives watched the cemetery all night and this morning they saw no trace of the missing banker.

SEARCH AT RIVER

The East River locale was also thoroughly searched and people living along the river's edge questioned, but such efforts brought no results.

Infirm from a long illness, sick in mind and body, the 68-year-old banker presumably should be an easy figure of identification with his hobbling walk and stooped shoulders.

When last seen, Harriman was walking eastward from the sanitarium toward the East River, which is only a few blocks away.

A barge captain, James Simpson, and his wife, said that around noon yesterday both of them had observed an elderly man with gray hair and gray mustache, walking with difficulty, approach the dock and gaze for a long time into the river.

Lindy on Famous Flight Six Years Ago Today

NEW YORK, May 20.—(INS.)—Six years ago today, the world stood breathless while one of history's most daring feats was in progress.

At 7:51 a. m. that day, a gangling, curly-haired youth named Charles Augustus Lindbergh took off from Roosevelt Field in an airplane christened the "Spirit of St. Louis."

His only bid for fame up to then had been a non-stop flight from St. Louis to New York, but he headed his ship across the Atlantic on a solo flight to Paris.

For 33 hours and 30 minutes the world waited, marveled and hoped against hope. Then the youth came down out of the cluods at Le Bourget Field, outside Paris, with the simple remark:

"Well, here we are."

Today—Well, Col. Charles Augustus Lindbergh needs no eulogy.

Thaw Hunting 'Ghost' To Write Life Story

NEW YORK, May 20.—Harry Thaw has sent an SOS roundrobin to a select list of New York literary agents seeking the services of a "perfect" ghost writer to work with him on his farm at Winchester, Va., on a story of his life, and "the sooner the better," it was learned today.

Thaw is not in a vindictive or vengeful mood, it was explained, but he wants to present in ironic rather than indignant form the fact that throughout his life he has probably been the greatest and most consistent mark for blackmailers in all history.

That he has spent more than $1,000,000 fighting and dodging suits and demands from men and women in London, New York, Pittsburgh, Kansas City and California. He is said to feel triumphant over the recent thwarting of a blackmailer, "although it cost him heavily for lawyers and detectives."

Thaw had his name on an earlier book called "The Traitor." He says now, however, that he was never pleased with the spirit of that manuscript, which put him in the light of a bad loser.

FISHER, IN COMMERCE POST, PLANS TO AID 'NEW DEAL'

EX-GOVERNOR SEES TRADE GAIN HERE

Declares Industrial, Business Leaders Are Hopeful

Former Gov. John S. Fisher hopes to be "part of the new deal" as the new president of Pittsburgh's Chamber of Commerce, he revealed today in his first interview as head of the city's industrial and commercial life. He is confident this "new deal" already is being expressed in business revival as well as a changed business psychology. He said:

"General conditions here are undoubtedly showing signs of improvement, reflected in railroad carloadings, increased steel production, and even the coal industry has been touched."

SEES OPTIMISM

From his conversations with industrial leaders in the Pittsburgh district, the former chief executive is convinced we are on the "right road." He continued:

"Underneath all this is a feeling of hopefulness expressed generally among businessmen.

"If this correct thinking has succeeded in starting business on a moderate advancement, there is no doubt that it will gain momentum with time."

That the Chamber of Commerce can play an important part in bringing this about is the contention of its president. He declared:

"There is no question that the Chamber can have great influence in this activity. It is representative of every phase of business and its influence penetrates to every business channel. I hope, and I know that the chamber as a body does too, to be part of this new deal."

FULL MILL SCHEDULE

Putting President Fisher's words into action, the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, which has made one encouraging move after another within the last three weeks, today announced full-time operations will get under way Sunday night at the Shenango plant at New Castle.

Ten of the plant's 40 mills which have been idle will be relit and the 30 operating regularly will continue to produce. Workers will be given more hours, it was reported.

A favorable reaction on local steel concerns was expected by experts today as a result of the $2 to $3 increase in prices announced yesterday by Inland Steel Company, of Chicago. Sheet steel was raised $3 a ton and strip steel advanced $2, it was announced.

CUBAN HOLIDAY BRINGS REBEL RIOT FEAR

Machado Troops Mass For Independence Day Disorders

HAVANA, May 20.—(AP.)—Police reserves were held in barracks and leaves of army officers and men were canceled today, the thirty-first anniversary of Cuban independence, following rumors that opponents of President Machado may choose the day for riots and disorders to signify their opposition to his regime.

Already the government was engaged in a campaign against 300 to 400 rebels in Santa Clara and Camaguey provinces, with Maj. Arsenio Ortiz, of the army general staff, in command. Three hundred additional troops have been dispatched to aid the 300 already in the field.

SANTIAGO TENSE

Police and army forces also were held in quarters at Santiago. The absence from their usual quarters of some persons of known revolutionary leanings and activity in opposition circles were believed responsible for the precautions.

Small groups of rebels were active near Cobre, Caney, San Luis, and other towns in the province, said reports reaching Santiago.

Travelers reaching here from Ciego de Avila, Santa Clara Province, reported an incipient uprising in nearby territory.

The ABC secret society and its allied group, the OCRR, respite all these developments, denied that a nation-wide revolutionary outbreak had been ordered for today.

MEETINGS BANNED

Despite the assurance, public demonstrations on the independence anniversary were banned. Groups of not more than three persons could gather in Havana Province.

Reports from Camaguey told of the dynamiting of small bridges on the North Cuba Railroad, causing a suspension of traffic.

A meager dispatch told of a bomb explosion at Esmeralda, in Santa Clara Province.

Another report from Santa Clara said telegraphic facilities had been disrupted throughout the area in which the rebels were active.

MINIMUM WAGE HELD VITAL BY MRS. PINCHOT

Warns State New Law Necessary to Kill Sweatshops

MILFORD, May 20.—(AP.)—In the quiet of her mountain estate, Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, yesterday warned Pennsylvania that it must set up a minimum wage law to wreck so-called "sweatshops," rescue abused child workers and protect legitimate business.

The state's vital, copper-haired "First Lady," to whom factory girls clung as she "picketed" with them in a recent strike demonstration, brought her inquiry to a vigorous climax by denouncing "cut-throat, fly-by-night" operators as obstructions to prosperity.

She lashed "operators who come—usually from New York—with perhaps a dozen sewing machines on a truck, hire a loft or a barn entirely unsuited for the purpose and lacking safety devices," and advertise for workers.

They pay from $3 to 50 cents a week, she said, adding grimly:

"Some pay nothing—some have moved out with several months unpaid wage bills."

Back in shady Milford after a week spent poring over records, reports and letters dealing with factory conditions, Mrs. Pinchot said Pennsylvania "gradually is becoming convinced that the workers must have protection that only a minimum wage law can give.

COURT BALKS COST RACKET OF SQUIRES

Judge Gardner's Ruling In Test Case Hits Multiple Fees

Justices of the peace and aldermen can no longer make a "racket" of their offices by crediting themselves and their constables with multiple costs arising out of the same case, under an opinion handed down late yesterday by Judge Samuel H. Gardner.

The ruling resulted from a test made of a McKeesport robbery case in which magistrate and constable costs of $162 had been retaxed by the Clerk of Courts, who allowed only $49 costs. Two men had been held for seven robberies. They had been arrested at one time, but seven informations had been entered, one for each robbery, and the entire set of costs entered up seven times for seven arrests, seven hearings and seven jail commitments.

In his opinion Judge Gardner says the magistrate is entitled to his fees for the information, entry, hearing, writing examination of defendant and transcript of certificate in each charge. He ruled that one warrant of arrest setting forth the different offenses would suffice, as well as one oath, one commitment, one release will serve.

The constable is ruled entitled to be paid for serving one warrant, one commitment and one release and mileage actually traveled. He directed the Clerk of Courts to retax the case in compliance with this ruling.

Immediately after Judge Gardner had filed his opinion, he met other county officials in a conference with constables and justices of the peace to discuss the costs question. District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Controller Robert G. Woodside and Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley were present.

Later, county officials appointed a committee to prepare a book of rules to govern the filing of costs. The book of rules will follow the opinion of Judge Gardner.

HUNT MOTORIST WHO HIT BOY

Judge Benjamin Lencher, of County Court, has appealed to the State Highway Patrol to learn the identity of the hit and run motorist who injured Claude McGuire, 12, a ward of Juvenile Court.

The highway patrol is expected to report early next week, according to W. B. Wells, probation officer.

Harry Harris, 31, of 1844 Webster avenue, was dismissed by Magistrate J. Scott Morgan in Traffic Court after being arrested with his brother-in-law, Israel Goodman, through a license number given police after the boy was run down March 22 near Penn and Friendship avenues.

Harris denied his car figured in the accident. Magistrate Morgan said the McGuire boy was not certain Harris was the man in the car.

ground is a natural resource which once used cannot be replaced, it is of interest to the nation that its production should be under reasonable control for the best interests of the present and future generations.

"My administration for many weeks has been in conference with the governors of the old producing states and with component parts of the industry, but it seems difficult, if not impossible, to bring order out of chaos only by state action.

"In fact, this is recognized by most of the governors concerned.

"There is a widespread demand for Federal legislation.

"May I request that this subject be given immediate attention by the appropriate committee or committees?

"The Secretary of the Interior stands ready to present any information or data desired.

"May I suggest further that in order to save the time of the special session it might be possible to incorporate action relating to the oil industry with whatever action the Congress decides to take in regard to other industries—in other words, that consideration should be given at the same time that action is taken on the bills already introduced and now pending in committee."

FEDERAL FUNDS AGAIN SOUGHT

Three representatives of the County Commissioners will leave Pittsburgh tomorrow night for Washington to negotiate again for a $20,000,000 loan for a public works program here.

James Rae and John Rice, employed two weeks ago to handle the county's interests in Washington, and Assistant Solicitor Churchill B. Mehard will make the trip.

Charles Haydock, the Philadelphia engineer also hired as a special representative of the Commissioners, today was to be notified his services here had ended. The Commissioners yesterday voted to dispense with the services of the engineer. This action followed receipt of protests against employment of an out-of-town engineer.

Ex-Butler Arrested In Extortion Plot

EAST ORANGE, N. J., May 20.—(AP.)—An ex-convict, former butler, was arrested yesterday charged with extortion and threatening the son of Orville G. Drake, socially prominent broker.

William G. Carlson, formerly employed in the household of the broker at South Orange, was seized, police reported, as he reached into the shrubbery at Watsessing Park for a package left there by Drake. It was to contain $8,000.

U. S. QUIZ CALLS MORE BANKERS

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—Partners in two more private banking firms were under subpena today to appear before an investigating subcommittee of the United States Senate Banking and Currency Committee immediately following J. P. Morgan and 10 of his partners.

Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the subcommittee, disclosed that partners of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Dillon, Read & Co. have been subpenaed to appear in Washington on June 6 and 9 respectively.

In addition, Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase National Bank, was to be served with a subpena before sailing today to represent American creditors of Germany at a conference in Berlin. This subpena is returnable July 14.

HERRON ORDERS WAGE INQUIRY

Mayor John S. Herron was scheduled today to delve into the wage scale of the General Contracting Corporation, engaged on a city sewer project. Congressman-elect Henry Ellenboken reported yesterday that the company was paying low wages.

Herron, directing Chief Engineer C. M. Reppert to investigate, said:

"We have been assured by contractors that they would pay a living wage."

J. L. Cox, treasurer of the contracting company, would say only:

"The men seem satisfied with the wages. I have heard no complaints from them."

PARADE MARKS 'DRESS UP DAY'

"Miss Prosperity" and "Uncle Sam" were welcomed to Pittsburgh today by Mayor John S. Herron as the Wood Street Association held a "Dress Up American" Day.

The visitors, in the persons of Miss Beryl Wallace and Blackstone Saunders, were featured in a downtown parade, luncheon and fashion show. Arriving at the County Airport by plane from Columbus, Miss Prosperity was greeted by Arthur C. Kaufmann, president of McCreery Company, and 10 other members of the businessmen's group.

Flag-bedecked automobiles formed a parade that proceeded downtown to pass a reviewing stand in Wood street where Mayor Herron spoke. Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, president of the Congress of Women's Clubs, presented "Miss Prosperity" with a bouquet in behalf of the women of the city.

The fashion parade was staged in McCreery's, where "Miss Prosperity" modelled approximately 40 dresses, gowns and outfits.

The program was planned to create interest in the "New Deal" confidence and in buying.

New State Beer Law Vendors Arrested

Two men arrested for selling copies of the new Pennsylvania beer laws at Diamond and Grant streets yesterday were to be arraigned in Central Police Court today.

The two, charged with violating a city ordinance, because they had no permit, were docketed as Robert Marsh, 24, of 621 Arch street, and Albert Modill, 36, who gave his address as city.

Wiggin Income Data Demanded in House

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—Representative McFadden, of Pennsylvania, yesterday introduced a resolution calling for the Secretary of the Treasury to give the House all information he has on the income for the past five years of Albert H. Wiggin, of New York, as president and director of the Chase National Bank, the American Express Company and all affiliates.

Youth Racing Train Fatally Hurt in Fall

Gilbert Griffith, 17, of 1538 Hunter street, Wilkinsburg, died early today in Columbia Hospital from injuries suffered when he tripped and fell beneath a freight train in Edgewood last night, according to a Coroner's report.

Griffith and three companions were racing to beat the train when the accident occurred, police said.

DIVORCE SUIT OMITS 'PEACH'

LOS ANGELES, May 20.—(INS.)—Dropping her charges against Corliss Palmer Brewster, beauty contest winner, once known as the "Georgia Peach," Mrs. Estelle A. Cohen was scheduled to appear before Judge Warren V. Tryon to seek a divorce from Albert J. Cohen, film writer and crack tennis player.

In her original complaint, Mrs. Cohen named Mrs. Brewster as co-respondent and also filed a suit for $100,000 damages against her for the alleged alienation of Cohen's affections. Mrs. Brewster had filed an answer to the heart balm suit and it is still pending.

Mrs. Cohen filed an amended divorce complaint charging cruelty and non-support and omitting mention of Mrs. Brewster.

FIREMEN FREE CRASH VICTIM

Imprisoned in the cab of his truck when it became wedged between a pole and a brick dwelling at 511 Carson street, the injured driver was rescued by firemen today.

William Coltin, 27, of 526 West Carson street, Duquesne, was driving a truck loaded with macaroni in Carson street when it skidded, crashed into a pole and came to a halt jammed between the pole and the house.

Firemen of No 11 engine company hacked away part of the cab to release Coltin. He was taken to South Side Hospital suffering from lacerations and shock. He was detained for observation.

The truck belongs to the Viviala Macaroni Company, of Carnegie.

YOUNG CHOSEN FOR PARLEY

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Owen D. Young, financier and industrialist, has been included by President Roosevelt in the list of seven American delegates to the London economic conference.

At a White House conference, attended by Secretary of State Hull and other presidential advisers, it was unanimously agreed that Young is "the best qualified man in the United States for such a place."

The administration is putting forth every effort to induce him to accept.

The President's list also includes Senator Johnson, Progressive Republican, of California. Johnson has not given his final answer, but Senatorial associates believe he will accept.

Secretary Hull, Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Former Gov. Cox, of Ohio, were selected several days ago. Hull will be chairman.

Representative Samuel D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and a seventh member, yet unknown, will complete the delegation, which sails May 31.

A reduction of one mill in the school tax levy was voted last night by the Mifflin Township School Board. Last year's levy was 29 mills.

TRUCK SANDWICHED, DRIVER TRAPPED

HOW TRUCK WEDGED ITSELF BETWEEN A POLE AND BUILDING, IMPRISONING ITS DRIVER

Driver William Coltin, 27, Duquesne, was rescued from this truck today at 511 Carson street by firemen who hacked away part of the cab to rush him to South Side Hospital. The truck skidded on the wet street, police reported. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

McCloskey Lays Bank Losses to Pinchot

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—Mayor Eddie McCloskey, of Johnstown, finished a busy day of conferences about his city's closed banks yesterday with a broadside of criticism fired at Gov. Pinchot.

He said:

"Pinchot should be held responsible for every dime in the closed state banks. His examiners and his banking department secretary said the banks were o. k. and let the people put in their money. And they weren't o. k. at all."

McCloskey called at the offices of Senators Reed and Davis, and at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to tell them of the plight of Johnstown's unemployed and what he believed was the matter with the banks.

He said he would return next week.

From banks, he turned to unemployment relief and said:

"You know that Gov. Pinchot never had a better friend than I was. But now I'm done with him, since I've found out he is using the state relief for political purposes. If the laborers on the highway are on the right side of the fence, they get paid cash. If they're on the wrong side, they get clothing and groceries—and not much of them."

What Are You Going To Do About It?

What racketeering costs small business men in this country has been indicated in New York City.

Truckmen—between 150 and 200 of them—have been paying $15 a month each for "protection"—when by law and by right they are entitled to PUBLIC protection from preying enemies.

And the thing has been going on for nearly two years—putting into the pockets of their oppressors more than $60,000 of mulcted money.

Multiply, if you can, this $60,000 by the number of trades in which racketeering exists—dozens of trades.

Multiply that by the number of cities and towns where racketeering is practised—hundreds of communities.

The total would astonish you—the NATIONAL DEBT is less than racketeers exact from the American public every year.

Then consider the methods of the trucking racket in New York—the lives of proprietors threatened, their property wrecked, their employes mauled by bullies.

Multiply again—and realize what racketeering means in lawlessness the country over.

Anything so appalling is every man's business. What are YOU going to do about it?

How a woman lived six years as a man. The unusual life story of "Col. Barker, of the British Army," told by herself in the American Weekly, the big magazine distributed with tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph.

NEWPORT AWAITS MRS. JELKE'S STORY AS COURT RECESSES

FORMER BEAUTY TO TAKE STAND MONDAY

Bit Husband Because He Was 'Caged Lion,' Counsel Contends

International News Service.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 20.—Newport society found other things to do today—it being a court holiday—while Mrs. Eugenia Jelke, 27-year-old former Southern beauty, and her counsel were preparing for a final siege in "Nini's" counter divorce suit against her 52-year-old broker husband, F. Frazier Jelke.

Mrs. Jelke, niece of the late United States Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, was expected to take the stand when court reconvenes on Monday.

Counsel for Mrs. Jelke in opening her counter suit—Jelke's case against his young wife having been completed—contended that "Nini" did not bite the ear of her wealthy husband in a fit of anger as alleged, but because he acted like a "caged lion" and "knocked" her to the floor.

Mrs. A. H. Woodward, 56-year-old mother of Mrs. Jelke, and Emil Harry Anderson, her chauffeur, gave testimony for "Nini."

Anderson, in a deposition, related his experiences while driving for the Jelkes on a tour of France. He told of Jelke insisting on taking "Nini" to see "a show" at a French house against her will; of Jelke calling his young wife "all the names he could think of," and of the broker taunting Mrs. Jelke for "being without financial means and dependent upon him."

Anderson quoted Jelke as saying to his wife:

"I guess you are going to leave me when your grandfather or aunt dies."

Jelke's tunts and language brought tears to his wife's eyes, Anderson said.

Jelke called his wife a "gold digger," according to Anderson. His depositions showed that Jelke struck Mrs. Jelke and on one occasion made a bump on her forehead.

MAN, GIRL HURT IN AMBULANCE COLLISION

Dormont Auto Victim Escape Hurts in Second Crash

Two persons were injured when an ambulance, speeding to St. Joseph's Hospital with a victim of an auto crash, collided with their automobile at South Tenth and Carson streets last midnight.

The ambulance crashed with a machine driven by Zygmont Sitar, 20, of 1600 Bingham street. He and Mary Roscoe, 20, of 26 South Sixth street, riding with him, were severely bruised. They were carried into the ambulance which continued to the hospital.

William L. Davis, 36, assistant cashier of the Iron and Glass Dollar Savings Bank of Birmingham, of 3339 Latonia avenue, Dormont, who lay in the ambulance with injuries suffered in a triple collision in Baldwin Township, suffered no additional injuries.

Clarence Rollinson, 35, driver of the ambulance owned by Edward B. Laughlin, an undertaker of Castle Shannon; Dr. R. M. Heath, of 2423 Library road, and Police Chief John H. Erbel, of Baldwin Township, riding with him also escaped injury.

Davis suffered a possible fracture of the skull when his car collided with two other machines, Chief Erbel reported. Davis' machine and another driven by Harry J. Walters, of 231 Alice street, Mt. Oliver, were forced off the highway, near the South Hills Country Club, according to Erbel. The third machine involved in the crash was said to have been driven by William C. Roehn, of 226 Charles street, Mt. Oliver.

PREACHER FOE OF MRS. BUCK SPEAKS HERE

Dr. Machen Hits Board Of Foreign Missions For Hiding Facts

Pearl S. Buck's chief critic, the Rev. Dr. J. Gresham Machen, chairman of faculty in the Westminister Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, and an ardent fundamentalist, will state his opinion of her views and also assail the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Penn avenues, at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

He is on his way to the Presbyterian General Assembly, opening May 24 at Columbus, where he will be chief spokesman for the fundamentalists in their fight against the so-called "modernists" typified by Mrs. Buck, noted author and former Presbyterian missionary in China. Dr. Machen says:

"The Board of Foreign Missions has not repudiated the laymen's report called "Rethinking Missions," which rejects all that Bible-believing Christians hold dear, such as the deity of Christ and the doctrinal elements of historic Christianity. Instead, the board has maintained a policy of concealing the real facts.

"A repudiation of 'Re-Thinking Missions' might entail financial loss. It might mean the elimination of gifts coming from the modernists who now support the board. From the worldly point of view, much could be said against such repudiation. But it would have the advantage of being honest."

The Rev. Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney, of the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, says of the Rev. Dr. Machen:

"In him you see a rare combination of intellectual ability and great courage. Men like him are the hope of the evangelical churches in their present struggle with Laodiceanism and apostasy. Only once in a century is the Church of Christ granted such a man. His challenge is yet to be answered by the Board of Foreign Missions."

FAMOUS TRAIN GREETED HERE

British transportation comforts were the point of interest to thousands of Pittsburghers today as the Royal Scot Express, famous ace train of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, en route to the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, was open to public inspection at the Pennsylvania Station.

The first complete British train seen in America in 40 years, the express has eight cars, with the most powerful type of British passenger engine. It will be open to the public until 10 o'clock tonight.

A recepition committee headed by former Gov. John S. Fisher, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; J. F. Deasy, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and C. M. Yohe, vice president of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, greeted T. D. Slattery, assistant to the vice president of the British railway, who is in charge of the tour.

11 JAP PLANES SCOUT PEIPING

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service.

PEIPING, May 20.—Violence leading to heightened Sino-Japanese tension broke out in Peiping today while 11 Japanese bombing planes threw residents into panic as they reconnoitered the city.

A young Chinese, aroused to fury by the Japanese invasion of North China, struck the sentry at the Japanese delegation with a broadsword, causing officials of the legation to move for immediate protection of Japanese residents of Peiping.

If the situation warrants, they said, they will call all Japanese civilians into the legation as a result of the incident, which threatens to complicate an agreement reached by Chinese and Japanese negotiators for cessation of military hostilities.

The eleven Japanese planes circled over the city apparently to observe the progress of withdrawal of Chinese troops from the battle zone in the north.

MILK SHIPPING AGAIN NORMAL

MILWAUKEE, May 20.—(INS.)—Milk shipments to the cities returned to normal volume today for the first time since the Wisconsin Co-operative Milk Pool strike began, a week ago.

Although a strike settlement was reached at a conference in Madison with Gov. A. C. Schmedeman early yesterday, farmers in many sections were not notified and continued to withhold delivery. Four truckloads of milk were dumped in Walforth and Milwaukee counties after the settlement was announced.

National Guardsmen called to the centers of disorder, numbering more than 2,000, were being demobilized today, and most of the pickets arrested during the week of violence were released.

Gov. Schmedeman has agreed to appoint a committee to study the grievances of milk producers.

ACCUSED MATE TO TESTIFY

John F. Clagett, 6409 Fifth avenue, head of the claims department of the National Surety Company, who is contesting the divorce action of his wife, Mrs. Marguerite L. Glagett, 700 St. James street, will take the stand Monday to oppose her action, his counsel said today.

Mrs. Glagett and her witnesses charged her husband ignored her, snubbed her friends, was dictatorial and failed to provide for her. Glagett's counsel, W. H. Graham, offered letters while Mrs. Glagett was on the stand, indicating that their early married life was happy.

The testimony yesterday revealed Clagett had frequent clashes with his father-in-law, Allen C. Stevenson, treasurer and a director of the Stevenson-Foster Company. Mrs. Glagett is represented by Attorney H. Fred Mercer. Judge Thomas M. Marshall is hearing the case.

Home of Robins On Fountain Waterproofed

CHICAGO, May 20.—(AP.)—America's robin population won't suffer any, if workmen in Grant Park have their way.

A mother and a father robin made the mistake of taking up quarters on top of a group of bronze figures that adorn Buckingham water fountain, and it looked like they and their four off-springs would get all wet when it came time to turn on the water, but the workmen fixed that up by building them a waterproof roof.

Now everything remains comfortable for the family.

MARTIN CHARGE HOLDS GIRL

Gloria Lee, dark-eyed night club hostess, was at liberty in $500 bail today, following a hearing before Alderman Sol S. Goldstein last night at which she was held for court on larceny charges brought by Nat Martin, brother of "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin.

The girl had previously brought assault and battery charges against Martin, charging he struck her several times, breaking her nose, in a fight in the Plaza Cafe, it was testified.

Martin testified last night he found the girl's hand in his pocket and a few moments later missed a $100 bill he had been carrying. The fight, he testified, occurred when he asked her about it.

Miss Lee did not testify, upon the advice of her counsel, W. D. Hilldorfer.

B. E. F. ENLISTS IN FOREST ARMY

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(INS.)—Whimsical as ever, the Bonus Army was tall-timber bound today, and liked it.

All the boys were joining up in President Roosevelt's Forest Army. They had to do a policy black-flip to sign on the dotted line, but a week in Washington has provided a pretty fair political background. That business of refusing the President's offer of three meals and a dollar a day in the forests was all a mistake.

Mr. Roosevelt didn't urge the Veterans to join the Forest Conservation when their committee called on him. But he did say that Fort Hunt will be turned into a Forest Army conditioning camp Monday afternoon.

After that time, the bonus marchersm ust check out as marchers must check out as Mr. Roosevelt said, warning the Veterans these conditions would be enforced.

RUM KING SHOT BY GUNMEN

CHICAGO, May 20.—(INS.)—Complete mystery today surrounded the shooting of Frank J. Parker, reputed millionaire owner of three Canadian distilleries, who was attacked by three men last night and seriously wounded.

Parker, known to police here as the "airplane bootlegger," was driving in North Ashland avenue when the trio of gunmen crowded his automobile to the curb with their car. The men opened fire when he tried to flee and one bullet struck him in the forehead, police said.

The belief was expressed that the trio were attempting to kidnap the wealthy distiller and their plans went awry when Parker fled. Whether there was any connection between the shooting and Parker's reputed liquor activities, detectives were unable to learn.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TO FLY HERE

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(AP.)—Stops at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Wichita, Amarillo, Albuquerque, Winslow and Kingman, Ariz., are on the airline Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is understood to have decided upon for her early June trip to Los Angeles.

She will leave June 2 or 3 to visit her son, Elliott, who recently took a position with an airlines company at Los Angeles.

Hanged With Photo Of Child He Killed

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., May 20.—(AP.)—Carrying to the scaffold a photograph of the 3-year-old girl he was convicted of murdering, Koji Hatamoto, 35, Los Angeles Japanese, was hanged yesterday.

The child, Mollie Kanda, was the daughter of Mrs. Ayako Kanda, 31, who is serving a life sentence here for the same slaying.

BUILDING FALLS ON BOULEVARD

A three-story brick building at 1011 Kirkpatrick street collapsed early today, showering bricks upon Bigelow boulevard and delaying traffic until the highway was cleared.

Police said the building had been condemned May 17.

Two Negro families occupied the structure. They escaped injury.

Passing when the rear of the building showered the boulevard with bricks, were two University of Pittsburgh law students, Frank Suffolitta, of 327 Pearls treet, and Morris Cohen, of 4740 Liberty avenue. They notified police.

FIND BODY; DRAG FOR 2ND BOY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 20.—(AP.)—The body of an 18-year-old youth, drowned at a picnic celebrating the close of the school term, was recovered by searchers who are still dragging Cheat River for his companion, whom he tried to rescue.

The youths were among 200 pupils of Georges Township School on an outing at Sunset Beach, across the West Virginia state line. Mike Tarko's body was found; that of Frank Shutock, 18, is missing.

Their canoe overturned in midstream. Two other youths swam ashore.

MOONEY'S TRIAL MAY BE DENIED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—(INS.)—A cloud hovered over Tom Mooney's new happiness today.

Transported here from San Quentin State Prison, where he has been a "lifer" for 16 years, America's foremost prisoner awoke in his jail cell today with the threat that his new trial he had long fought for, scheduled for Monday, may be halted by a Supreme Court mandate.

Mooney was scheduled to go on trial on a long dormant indictment charging him with the identical crime for which he was once sentenced to be hanged—participation in the planting of a bomb which killed 10 persons during the 1916 Preparedness Day parade here.

The threat to halt the trial came when John A. O'Gara, former assistant district attorney, filed a request with the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to halt the trial on the grounds that the issue had already been adjudicated, that his life could not twice be placed in jeopardy and that the trial would be a needless expense to the taxpayers.

NICOLA FIGHTS WOMAN'S SUIT

Frank F. Nicola, real estate broker, yesterday filed in Federal Court an answer to the suit of Mrs. Katharine Murdoch Shepherd, in which he denied owing her $5,300. Nicola asserted Mrs. Shepherd is indebted to him $956 in an account involving sale of some pictures.

Mrs. Shepherd claims the $5,300 is the balance of $6,000 Nicola, she says, agreed on July 7, 1932, to pay her in lieu of setting up a $300,000 trust fund for her and her five children.

REFORMER TOLD TO PAY YOUTH

CHICAGO, May 20.—(AP.)—A jury yesterday ordered Daniel Gilday, elderly reform worker, to pay $12,000 damages for the bullet wound he inflicted on 18-year-old Herman Knol.

Young Knol testified Gilday was intoxicated and fired while he was attempting to help Gilday home. Gilday said he believed Knol and a companion were robbers.

Gilday was sentenced to a year in jail, but the State Supreme Court remanded the case and in another trial he was fined $100.

AIRPLANE FALLS IN RIVER; 3 HURT

GALLIPOLIS, O., May 20.—(AP.)—An airplane with three men aboard plunged into the Ohio River here late yesterday. The occupants, Clarence B. Connor, C. B. Christie and Raymond Dawson, all of Charleston, W. Va., were injured but managed to flounder about in the strong current until rescued by James Walker and Edward Henry, who happened to be rowing a boat nearby.

The airplane sank into 30 feet of water a moment after the crash.

Russia," and on "our own interests and ambitions."

Mr. Cravath, as far from Communism and Bolshevism as a bird of paradise is from a sea lion, says we need not adopt or approve Russia's doctrine.

SOME WOULD not recognize Russia because Russia refuses to recognize God.

But we recognize nations that recognize all sorts of queer gods. What is the difference between recognizing a FALSE god and recognizing NONE? Why not trust to the all-powerful Ruler of the universe to attend to Russia better than we could do it?

THE BRITISH are reported to have failed in their last of many efforts to climb Mt. Everest. If it be true, the British will continue trying, which is a British characteristic.

Meanwhile, British aviators have flown over the top of Mt. Everest, getting photographs and maps of the earth's greatest mountain range. Actually climbing, on hands and knees, is no longer necessary.

The Spanish flying genius, Cervera, or some other, will probably soon land a plane on the topmost peak.

World Is Weary Of 'Peace' and Yearns for Quiet

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

With fifty-four international hens setting in Geneva they should hatch an egg that will frighten an ostrich.

The world was sick of war and wanted peace. It tried Lausanne, Versailles, The Hague and other cities too temporary to be remembered.

Now, the world is tired of that kind of peace and wants quiet.

Fifteen years have gleamed and dimmed since the last soldier laid down the sword and the first diplomat picked up the pen.

It seems that the pen is mightier than the scimitar. And the black blot of the quill is deadlier than the red blot of the bolo.

We're back in Geneva again, engined with optimism, geared with philanthrophy and powered with international goodwill.

We should get the thing running this time and hang up some amicable mileage.

THREE CHURCH GROUPS PREPARING FOR ASSEMBLIES

TWO TO MEET HERE, OTHER IN OHIO

Three of Pittsburgh largest church bodies are preparing for their annual assemblies. The one hundred and forty-fifth Presbyterian General Assembly will be held in Columbus, O., on May 25. The United Presbyterians will assemble in the First United Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Thackery street, on June 27, and the Methodist Episcopal Conference will be held in the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church, California avenue, from June 6 to 9.

Dr. Machen

The old fight between fundamentalists and modernists will be renewed in the Presbyterian Assembly next week. The Presbytery of Philadelphia will present an overture asking that the assembly elect to positions on the Board of Foreign Missions only persons who accept the conservative doctrines.

TO PREACH HERE

Tomorrow in the Point Breeze Church, Penn and Fifth avenues, the Rev. Dr. J. Gresham Machen, ardent fundamentalist faculty chairman of Westminster Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, who was instrumental in obtaining the resignation of Pearl S. Buck, noted author and former missionary, will preach on "The Situation in the Church." He is on his way to the Assembly at Columbus.

The new chapter on marriage, requiring couples to give their minister three days' notice before they can be wed in a Presbyterian Church, will be read into the church's statutes at the assembly. The law, adopted by a vote of the Presbyteries since last year's assembly in Denver, will be substituted for the present one in the church directory of worship which stipulates that "the purpose of marriage ought to be sufficiently published a proper time previous to the solemnization of it."

These ministers have been elected to represent the Pittsburgh Presbytery at the assembly: The Rev. Alexander Gibson, McKinley Park; the Rev. Howard Rodgers, Greenfield; the Rev. Dr. George P. Rowland, Aspinwall; the Rev. W. F. Reber, East Liberty; the Rev. I. K. Teal, Tabernacle, and the Rev. Dr. William L. McEwan, pastor emeritus of the Third Presbyterian Church. They will be accompanied to the assembly by elders, church secretaries and laymen.

UNION CONVENTION

In conjunction with the United Presbyterian General Assembly in June, the Young People's Christian Union will hold their annual convention in Syria Mosque. Union meetings will be held nightly in the Mosque. The Women's General Missionary Society will convene in the First Baptist Church. Missionary projects, reports on prohibition and reforms, and discussions of evangelism and fundamentalism will take place.

The Pittsburgh Methodist Episcopal Conference, usually of a week's duration, has been cut this year to three days. Reports on prohibition, temperance and social conditions will be made, general business conducted, and anniversaries observed.

'Letters' Subject At East Liberty 'Y'

T. H. Swartzlander, Bible teacher, will discuss "Letters to the Galatians, Philippians and Colossians," at the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. at 8 p. m. Monday.

The Story of Queen Esther -:- CHAPTER IV -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

The beautiful Jewess, Esther, who had kept her race a secret while she was waiting in the palace with other maidens to be presented to the King, at last was brought before Xerxes, lord of many provinces.

Xerxes at once fell in love with Esther and placed the royal crown upon her head.

Meantime, in the court of the palace, her poor uncle, Mordecai, secretly rejoiced.

Social Conference Abandoned by M. E.'s

Plans to bring a number of nationally prominent speakers and ministers from 12 conferences in eight states to Pittsburgh for a "Social Action" conference of 200 ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church have been abandoned.

The plans for the conference, May 23 to 21, were cancelled because response indicated light attendance, according to the Rev. B. F. Crawford, of the Perrysville Methodist Episcopal Church.

FREDERICK W. WELTY

PEACE PAGEANT BY CHILDREN

Children of the Presbyterian and St. Stephen's Episcopal churches, Sewickley, will celebrate International Goodwill Day by presenting a pageant in St. Stephen's parish house at 5 p. m. tomorrow.

Sponsored by a committee on education in the ways of peace, the play is entitled "Serving the World, a Pageant of the Nations." An allegorical figure of the world will be portrayed by Miss Shirley Adams.

Dean Francis Cotter will conduct a short service and the Rev. Dr. Owen D. Odell will speak on international peace. Miss Margaret Campbell is chairman.

St. Lawrence P. T. A. To Meet Tomorrow

The Parent-Teacher Association of St. Lawrence School will hold its regular meeting in St. Lawrence Church hall, Penn and Atlantic avenues, at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

P. J. Byrne, dramatic and literary critic, will deliver an address.

Church Anniversary Services Continue

Services commemorating the fortieth anniversary of the Lincoln Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church will be continued tomorrow. Mrs. Christine Miller Clemson sings at the evening services. Former members and old friends of the church have been invited to join in the services.

2 Churches to Mark Birthdays Tomorrow

Frankstown Ave. and Brookline Groups To Celebrate

Two Pittsburgh churches will observe anniversaries tomorrow. Bishop Adna W. Leonard, of the Pittsburgh Area, Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach tomorrow morning in the Brookline Methodist Episcopal Church at the seventh anniversary service of the dedication of the church.

A musical program will be given in the evening by the church choir, assisted by the Orpheus Choir of Pittsburgh, under the direction of John M. Ferguson.

The Fourth Methodist Protestant Church, Frankstown avenue, will observe the tenth anniversary of their new church building. The Rev. Dr. J. Sala Leland, now serving the thirteenth year of his pastorate, will preside.

At 10:45 a. m. tomorrow the sermon will be preached by the Rev. T. Le Roy Hooper, of the Knoxville Methodist Protestant Church.

The annual church banquet was held last night. The Rev. D. John C. Broomfield, president of the Methodist Protestant General Conference, spoke.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow services in the Mt. Washington Methodist Episcopal Church, Sycamore street, will be devoted to the anniversary of the Epworth League, according to the Rev. G. E. Brenneman, pastor.

BISHOP LEONARD

PASTORS WILL TALK ON BEER, SWEATSHOPS

More than 200 clergymen of the Pittsburgh district have been asked to announce in their pulpits tomorrow a mass meeting Thursday, May 25, to protest against sweatshops in Pennsylvania.

The meeting will be held in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, with Stephen Rausenbusch, former mediation head of the State Department of Labor, the speaker. The meeting is sponsored by the League of Social Justice.

Mr. Snodgrass

Two Pittsburgh churches tomorrow will take up the problem of sweatshops and one will have discussions on beer. At 7:45 p. m. tomorrow in the First Christian Church, Arch street and Montgomery avenue, the Rev. R. E. Snodgrass will preach on "Our Shame and Our Salvation." Some things will be said about "immoral conditions on the North Side and sweatshops in our state," he said.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow, the Rev. Alfred Johnson will preach on "Sweatshops and the City of God" in the Squirrel Hill Christian Church, Murray avenue. At 7:45 p. m. tomorrow in open forum, these questions will be discussed in the Knoxville Christian Church, Knox avenue by the Rev. W. H. Hanna: "Shall Christians Buy Dry?" and "Ought Beer To Be Sold in the Parks?"

Dr. Luther Freeman To Preach at Emory

Thee Rev. Dr. Luther Freeman, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, Highland avenue and Rippey street, during the World War, will preach at the church at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Dr. Freeman left Pittsburgh 13 years ago to assume the pastorate of the American Church at Shanghai and is now pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Pomona, Cal.

He is making a tour of the East and will spend several days in Pittsburgh, where he has a wide acquaintance.

BILL GETS BUMP AFTER HIS FIRST TAKE-OFF

'Pancake' Landing Ends Young Flier's First Attempt

WIN YOUR WINGS
Installment No. 6.

Bill spent much time at the airport, watching the mechanics and talking to pilots. As a result he picked up much information that was not in textbooks, and almost unconsciously his attitude began to change. He began to realize that aviation is a business. To be successful it requires organization and a high sense of responsibility.

Every man must be a specialist—licensed engine mechanics, licensed airplane mechanics, licensed radio operators, instrument specialists, and so on down the list.

One day as Bill was walking with his instructor toward the plane, the latter turned to him, announcing:

"We'll try landings and take-offs today. Remember the rules?"

"Yes."

"Okay, and don't forget that a plane landing has the right of way over planes moving on the ground or taking-off. The other thing to remember is that if two of you are maneuvering for a landing, the fellow who is lower has the right of way."

"I won't," said Bill as they scrambled into the plane.

"All right, let's go." Jack yelled above the noise of the propellers. "I'll take her off and land once, then you try."

'WILLIAM' DISCOVERING WHAT MAKES A SHIP GO: THE MOTOR

Bill watched carefully as Jack eased the plane off the ground and, making a wide circle, glided gently toward the airport. As they came closer to the ground the plane leveled off and settled on the runway with wheels and tail skid touching simultaneously.

At a signal from the instructor, Bill took the stick and, opening the throttle wide, started his first take-off.

Stick forward—tail up—hold her straight—all controls neutral—gently back with the stick and they were in the air. Around the airport Bill circled to the leeward side of the field, and about 1,500 feet behind it. He throttled down the engine and banked into the wind.

With the engine idling Bill could hear the whistle of the flying wires in the wind and flattened the plane out a little to reduce his speed.

Looking out to the right he could see they were about level with the roof of the hangar. A second more and he began pulling back on the stick.

With a plump the ship pancaked onto the ground and after bouncing a couple of times rolled to a stop.

"Leveled off too soon," Jack Miller told him. "You were landing her when you were still six feet in the air. Bring her down lower next time."

"Whew!" Bill exclaimed, raising his goggles. "I thought I'd washed out the landing gear."

The instructor laughed.

"Don't you know you're in a licensed ship? That means it's built to withstand about seven times the strain it would normally be subjected to. Now, let's try again."

Sturdy Craft Isn't Harmed, Teacher Assures Him

ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS:

10—Can an airplane marked NX carry passengers for hire?

11—What is the minimum altitude allowed for flying over congested districts?

(Rules of contest will appear in Sunday's Sun-Telegraph, together with contest entry blank.)

BORAH, MOLEY SPEAK :-: Former Gov. La Follette To Discuss Russia :-: ON AIR TONIGHT

College Crew Race Told By Husing

The radio spotlight focuses on world affairs tonight with addresses by Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho; Philip F. LaFollette, former Governor of Wisconsin, Under Secretary of State Raymond Moley, member of President Roosevelt's "brain trust," scheduled.

Senator Borah, addressing a meeting of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in Washington, discusses world peace over NBC-KDKA at 10 p. m.

LaFollette's talk, entitled "Impressions of Russia," is carried by the same facilities at 9. The speaker, a son of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette and brother of Senator Robert M., Jr., bases his remarks on an extensive study of conditions in that country during a recent tour.

Moley, making his radio debut as an officer of the Roosevelt administration, speaks on the impending world economic conference during the WJAS Columbia Public Affairs Institute at 10:15.

Childs Cup Race

Ted Husing's description of the race for the Childs Cup between the crews of Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia universities on the Schuylkill River in Philadelphia is listed for WJAS listeners-in at 6.

Theodore Henry, the only known person now living who was present at the dress rehearsal of the original production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," reminisces as a highlight of the weekly Gilbert and Sullivan concert on KDKA at 9:15.

A broadcast from the Wisconsin High School Band tournament, in which 70 organizations are to participate, is the WCAE 4 p. m. bill. Included is a brief talk by Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, on "The Significance of Music in Education."

Walter Beck, the collegiate hill-billy formerly heard at 6:15, moves to the 6:45 spot on WJAS tonight.

KDKA at 8:30 presents a 30-minute program of sacred songs by the Homestead Presbyterian Choir of 50 voices under the direction of Frederick A. Welty.

For the music lovers: Chatauqua Opera Association program, featuring selections from Offenbach's opera, "Tales of Hoffman," KDKA at 4:45, and an all-Wagner recital by Marshall Bidwell, organist, broadcast from Carnegie Music Hall at 8:15 by WWSW.

Phil Dewey does a guest appearance with B. A. Rolfe during the latter's Saturday night dancing party via WCAE at 10.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

One proud Edgewood pappy came bursting in with news of his son and heir's latest quip. While working in the garden, and being deeply annoyed at what he thought were vicious insects, he discovered himself to be the target for his son's bean shooter. Feeling this a demand on his paternal duty, he preached:

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself, shooting those beans? The children in the city would like to have them to eat."

To which the young sniper replied:

"I know, but I can't shoot them that far."

For no reason at all, we searched the book stalls of the lending library popular with Grant Building girls, and found that the cleanest appearing books, the least used, were a theologian's discussion of the Bible, a dictionary and a cook book.

Frank Campbell, of Bradhead street, after hearing stories about unpleasant Forest camp conditions, made a personal inspection of Heart's Content. He writes:

"The very atmosphere is invigorating. The boys were in a jolly mood. Some were lolling around, others playing baseball, pitching horseshoes, or batting mushball. They are radiant with health. They work eight hours a day, five days a week and proud of the few dollars earned. Living conditions are good and the food is excellent."

Mr. Campbell sincerely appreciates the courtesy bestowed upon him at camp during the visit.

'Kid' Sister

As "Lillian," Helen Wayne's wrangles with the kid brother go to make WCAE's "Our Family" program one of the most realistic on the air. Tune in on the sketch at its new hour—8:30 to 9 o'clock tonight.

Rubinoff to Talk Over Radio At Last, for Globe-Trotter

By AIRCASTER

A scoop for the Globe-Trotter.

Although his success has been achieved largely through radio, Dave Rubinoff, Pittsburgh's network-famed maestro, has never been interviewed over the air . . . so on Monday at 2:15, he'll submit to quizzing by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, during the latter's regular broadcast over WCAE and WJAS.

With his "wyoleen," the maestro also is billed to launch KDKA's new nightly series, "Pittsburgh Spotlights," Monday night at 6 o'clock. Marguerite Lang, dramatic soprano, and Cass Ward Whitney, baritone, are to be featured in the initial program.

Rubinoff will be here all next week for an engagement at the Willows, from where he will broadcast nightly over WWSW.

With Jan Garber slated for a one-night stand Wednesday, May 31, at Eddie Peyton's club on Steubenville pike, Eddie and the other members of the five-piece Dixie Dandies, once featured by Garber, plot a two-day salute to their former boss via WJAS Monday and Tuesday nights, May 29 and 30, at 11:30.

Will Ryshanek interrupts his Sunday night KDKA broadcasts following tomorrow's program to take his orchestra on a tour of West Virginia and Pennsylvania. He holds forth at the University of Pittsburgh's spring formal at the Hotel Schenley tonight.

The Paradise Harbour Orchestra has been booked for the Anatole Club's Spring Cotillion, to be held at Webster Hall, Monday, May 29.

A new singer, known as "Poet Prince," comes into the radio limelight via NBC-KDKA Wednesday night.

Globe-Trotter's Schedule

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, relays the latest news flashes direct from the editorial rooms to dialers in the Pittsburgh metropolitan area today over WCAE at 9:05 a. m. and 6:30 p. m., and over WCAE-WJAS at 12:15 p. m. and 2:15 p. m.

American Weekly on Air Today

"The Doctor Almost Makes a Mistake," a dramatization from real life revealing a wealthy doctor's vain attempt to rear his daughter in girlish innocence, is presented today over WCAE at 7:45 p. m.; WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., at 5:45 p. m., and WMMN, Fairmont, W. Va., at 6:45 p. m.

Lloyd Nolan, star of the current Broadway success, "One Sunday Afternoon," has the principal role.

The playlet is based on an article appearing in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph.

Seibel to Resume Talks Tomorrow

George Seibel, the Sun-Telegraph's literary and dramatic critic, whose regular WCAE talks were canceled this week due to his absence from the city, but supplemented by an NBC red network broadcast last Saturday, resumes his schedule tomorrow night at 7 with a discussion of the latest books.

Scores and scores and scores of the younger set of Pittsburgh's social realm will go to work for the day—selling tiny artificial red geraniums for the Children's Hospital twenty-third annual flower day.

After a hard day's work all the young women will troop to Sewickley for the patchy party the Sewickley Child Health Association will give tonight in the Edgeworth Club, a benefit, of course.

Laura Childs, one of the committee for the patchy party, will be among those selling flowers at the Allegheny Country Club today. Mrs. Lewis A. Park is chairman there, aided by Mrs. Alexander H. Hunter, Mrs. David M. Gilmore and Nancy Lea Byers.

Selling Flowers

Among the younger set selling flowers for the Hospital in Pittsburgh are Dorothy Blaxter, Marion, Ann, Virginia and Patricia Keating.

Others are Jane McAfee, Peggy Nelson, Katharine Frazer, Virginia Evans, Peggy Robinson, Josephine Stiren, Marnie Hine, Betty Chesterman, Martha Arnold, Bettie Guiler, Caroline Mitchell, Ellinor Reed, Bunny Todd, Dorothy Lott, and ever so many more than I've space to mention.

Brief trips here and there are varying spring days for many of the smart set. Among those visiting New York have been Mrs. W. S. Flower and the J. D. Ritcheys, of the Schenley Apartments, all of whom stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Visiting Gotham

The C. J. Pierces have been at Hot Springs during the past week.

MUSIC

Pittsburgh Lutheran Choir

Carnegie Music Hall

Homer Ochsenhirt and the Pittsburgh Lutheran Choir, accompanied by a small symphony orchestra, gave us Mendelssohn's oratorio "St. Paul" in Carnegie Music Hall last night.

It has been many years since we have heard this work professionally in Pittsburgh, and we were grateful for a hearing of this beautiful music. It is not music of a crusader like Bach, nor of a colorful Italian worshiper like Rossini, but it is the fluent, quiet and lovely music of a soul which seems to have found peace in the church. The placing of recitative among solo voices and part choruses is unusually strange in this work and not at all consistent with the dramatic theme, but the choruses are effective and especially the solo music for bass is moving.

Mr. Lissfelt

The choir has indeed a right flexible tone, but never quite holds on until the climaxes. Rythmically it has weak moments and the orchestra was not always precise.

Among the soloists Helen Bell Rush held first place for her true tone and management of the many difficult recitatives. Arthur Ray Davis sang the tenor parts clearly and skillfully. Raymond Griffin has a very good bass voice, not fully developed to its possibilities. But of all the singing I have ever heard, that of the contralto, Rosemary Giddis, puzzles me most.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Helen Leovy Selected Junior League Director

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—(AP.)—The Association of Junior Leagues of America today had voted to attack undesirable working conditions through legislation and community opinion.

A resolution adopted at the closing session of the association's annual convention yesterday recommended that leagues undertake "non-partisan civic and legislative education" of members. In this connection the delegates were urged to seek public office if necessary to achieve their goals.

Another resolution approved suggests that leagues "take an active part through the molding of civic opinion to secure eradication of such unhealthy and uneconomic conditions as may threaten the welfare of our citizens."

Toronto, Ont., was chosen for the 1934 convention, and two national officers were elected, Miss Abigail B. Schegell, of Pasadena, Cal., vice president, and Miss Elizabeth Taylor, Little Rock, Ark., secretary.

Miss Helen Leovy, of Pittsburgh, was elected regional director of the Third district.

Miss Gertrude S. Ely, of Bryn Mawr, former chairman of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, lauded the leagues for their decision to campaign for better working conditions.

Pittsburgh Club B.P.W. Meeting Hostess

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 20.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Business and Professional Women's Club opened a three-day meeting at the Summit yesterday. Two hundred delegates are present.

Mayor William C. Hatfield welcomed the visitors and Mrs. Alice Liveright, state secretary of welfare, spoke.

A visit to nearby Fort Necessity was made in the afternoon.

Last evening was devoted to entertainment, with the Pittsburgh Club acting as hostess.

Officers will be elected today.

University Women Urged To Back Disarmament

MINNEAPOLIS, May 20.—(AP.)—Staunch support of efforts to achieve disarmament and lasting international peace was urged on the American Association of University Women last night by Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College and of the association.

A 'defeatist' attitude is altogether too prevalent, said the only woman member of the United States delegation to the Geneva disarmament conference last year, in speaking on "The Outlook for Disarmament" at the association convention's international dinner. That is not the way in which to win the battle for peace, she added.

On behalf of disarmament, women can be intelligent, they can use their energy not in criticising what is being done or not being done; they can use their energy in securing collective and individual pressure upon the governments in support of international co-operation and they can keep their heads cool and hearts warm, Miss Woolley stated.

There are altogether too many people—some of them highly intelligent and influential—becoming cynical and pessimistic, she commented.

The Junior auxiliary of the East Liberty Woman's Club entertained Mrs. Joseph Steim, state chairman of Juniors, and Mrs. F. R. Davis, southwestern chairman, at the home aof their president, Mrs. R. P. Marshall, last night.

Mrs. Philip S. Beese, president of the senior club, and her officers were also guests. The program consisted of an illustrated lecture on the "Isle of Bali," by Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Smith.

Ingram Club Juniors To Induct New Officers

All committee chairmen will report, new officers will be inducted and a playlet will be presented Monday evening at the meeting of the Ingram Juniors in Firemen's Association Hall.

The play, "Two Tables of Bridge," is under the direction of Miss Alice Geerlings, chairman of the literary-dramatic committee.

THE SHORT JACKET PROVES AS POPULAR AS EVER THIS YEAR

IT MAY BE our pilgrim ancestors. It may be innate chic. But the fact remains that women don't like to be seen on the city streets without some sort of wrap. Even on the hottest days they wear capes or jackets or little furs.

JACKETS ARE the special pets of this season. They change your costume from just a dress to an ensemble. They give you a trig, tailored look, even when their cut is informal. You can wear them over a sleeveless wisp of a dress and peel them off when you're indoors.

* * *

THERE'S BEEN a great flurry about finger tip lengths and three-quarters, but when it's broiling hot and the pavements are squashy underfoot, there's nothing cooler-feeling and certainly nothing cooler-looking than the really abbreviated jacket.

THE OUTFIT on the left is especially exciting because it embodies a lot of fashion points. See how crisp the roughly woven natural color linen jacket is, all cinched in at the waist, all broad in the shoulders! The black linen dress is as simple as simple, sleeveless and in perfect taste. The orange wool scarf serves as seasoning and very peppy, too. This you could alternate with other colors, of course. Gloves and hat are black linen.

THE DRESSIER model sketched on the right is a soft cotton printed with a more-or-less Persian design. This has a quite different sort of jacket, with fullness introduced in the back below a twist of the material (one of those details that make all the difference). Impossible to describe the color scheme, as there is a whole rainbow of shades in it. Which means that you could wear it with many different accessory sets.

AND—stop to consider—both of these will launder beautifully!

My Own Life Story + By Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

Evelyn Says Harry Soon Tired of Quiet Married Life in Thaw Mansion

SYNOPSIS

Yesterday Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told of her wedding in Pittsburgh to Harry K. Thaw—a marriage contracted, she says, at the persuasion of Thaw's mother and his friends. Previously she had described her love for Stanford White and her confession of that love to Thaw during one of the European trips she made with him. Evelyn is writing her life story as a warning to girls tempted to break the conventions that "you can't win."

By EVELYN NESBIT THAW

(Copyright.)

CHAPTER XV.

I was now a Thaw. That made me ex-officio a member of the society of Pittsburgh and points east.

But Mother Thaw, who held the family's passkey to most everywhere—the Copley and Thaw millions—was more a leader in Presbyterian Church circles than a social leader.

The Thaws were being visited always by an endless stream of ministers and ministers' wives, missionaries and missionaries' wives and charity workers.

We went to church every Sunday. I wouldn't have minded if I hadn't been married to Harry. I rather enjoyed the sermons in that old Presbyterian Church myself. The church was architecturally delightful—Mother Thaw had financed it.

Life at Lyndhurst

As dull as Lyndhurst, the Thaw mansion, was, there were lots of dinner parties.

Proper Mother Thaw liked to swallow a glass of wine now and then. The day we were married, for instance, she toasted us with a couple of glasses of champagne.

But she tolerated no Sunday newspapers in the house, especially after the notoriety caused by Alice's spectacular marriage to the impoverished Earl of Yarmouth.

Always an insatiable reader, I spent most of my time in the library. Harry and I saw every play coming to Pittsburgh. I hadn't been in the house 24 hours before all the dogs in the household had attached themselves to me. One old pomeranian, bleary-eyed with age, named Fenris, who had always devotedly followed in Mother Thaw's train, left her flat, but she didn't seem to mind. To my intense astonishment, I discovered that Mother Thaw was beginning to be really fond of me.

I never smoked cigarets, never took more than one glass of wine with dinner and never embarrassed her in any way.

Neil, the coachman, would wash all the dogs once a week. Thinking it would delight Mother Thaw to see them all fluffy and clean and frisking about, I would go about the house searching for her and usually located her in her "office," a tiny room on the second floor, containing a businesslike desk. There she attended to her voluminous correspondence. She had a secretary, a tall woman named Miss Coe.

"Look, Mother Thaw," I would chirp, entering the "office," "at the dogs. They've come to pay their respects."

She would turn, all smiles, and say:

"Sit down, Evelyn, dear."

I would sit on the floor and play with the dogs.

Helping Mrs. Thaw

Mother Thaw had a habit when she wrote letters of throwing them on the floor, the idea being that they would not get mixed that way. She was almost always entirely surrounded by letters. I usually helped her gather them up and put them into their proper envelopes and seal them.

Mother Thaw was really a good-looking woman, and when she wore one of her good dresses with frills of real lace at the throat and wrists and her fluffy white hair was nicely dressed, she presented a handsome picture. And when she was in good humor she could make herself quite charming. Her charities were numerous. She had a raft of poor relatives to support and she was known to be very kind to impoverished ministers.

In all the time I lived with her, I had only one quarrel with her and that was a slight one.

One day I happened to be in the main hall when the mail was delivered. Among the other letters, I saw one addressed to my husband in a well-known scrawl. That was the first time I ever had any idea that one of my former chorus-pals and Harry were exchanging letters. Later I was to learn plenty on that subject.

All this while, it seems, she was acting as a spy, keeping an eye on Stanford White, writing to Harry. She told him every move Stanford White made and everything he had to say.

Later, during the first Thaw trial, I found dozens of her letters on the desk of one of Thaw's lawyers. But, as I say, at this time, I lived in blissful ignorance of these sinister events leading up to the tragedy.

It was a terrible disillusionment later to learn that this girl, whom I had always boasted as one of my best friends, had been diligently playing one man against the other. They were both giving her money and both kept in constant communication with her.

Harry Restless

For a brief period Harry enjoyed his new role, that of a sedate married man. Then he became restless and nervous. Suddenly he announced a business trip to New York. He left me at home and was gone for several weeks. Every now and then this happened until it became a regular custom.

In spite of my previous thoughts on the subject and aversion to marriage, I took this marriage very seriously; avoided all thought of a further stage career and realized I had taken on a big job trying to reform Harry and transform him into a contented, normal citizen.

I never even dreamed of telling him a lie.

But I basked in no illusions regarding this marriage. The great, beautiful, romantic love of which every girl dreams was not for me. Now that I look back on it all, I realize a great pity filled my heart and my feelings toward Thaw were more maternal than anything else, though I was only a kid, myself. When I wrote him, my letters were those of a schoolgirl to her class sweetheart, opening "Dearest Harry," and closing "lovingly, Evelyn." I can't exactly say what my feelings were. I wasn't in love, but I wanted to be dutiful, decent and kind.

As little joy as there was in this union for me, I had made up my mind to be satisfied. Romance was out, but the thought of a life of calm security was enough for the time. I was bored, but I was in for it and "could take it."

Thaw's trips to New York, however, his conferences with his girl spy, and his moments of plotting against Stanford White were becoming more and more frequent.

I read and read and read in the ancestral library of the Thaws in Pittsburgh — read everything but the handwriting on the wall!

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Jealousy Makes a Woman Her Own Greatest Enemy

Why is jealousy?

Why can some of us take love as it comes—joyously, generously—sharing all the happiness which may be shared; facing the mishaps bravely, tolerantly—

While others, though vowing deathless devotion, poison every moment with suspicion, resentment — dark, disloyal fears?

How do hearts get that way? Lois's, for example—brand-new bride with a husband who's crazy about her. And yet—

Dear Elsie:

I have been married just two months, and have been very happy—but for one thing. How can I overcome being jealous of my husband? I love him more than anything else in the world, yet I do not believe in him.

He has never given me cause to doubt him. He has never lied to me. Still, I have that feeling that he is cheating. I have tried not to show this feeling, but he is beginning to see it.

Before I married him I was very jealous of a certain girl he works with. Knowing this, he told me I was silly to ever think that any other girl could ever come between us.

Now, here is my problem. I am in such a state of mind that I want him to give up his job, so he won't be near her at any time. Then I think my mind will be at ease, and I will have the confidence in him that I want to have.

Am I doing the right thing in asking him to do this? He says he will do anything in the world for me, and that if I will feel better, he will give up this job and try for another. He says he loves me, and that our happiness depends entirely upon our believing in one another.

JEALOUSY GROWING

Do you think that I am being just a silly little fool to ask this, or do you think I am doing the right thing?

When he is with me I have all the confidence in the world in him, but when I am alone I am thinking crazy things which I try to make myself believe are not true.

What shall I do? I want my marriage to be a success. He means everything in the world to me. I thought that, once we were married, I wouldn't feel this way any more, but I find I am getting more deeply into it than ever.

What's the matter with me?

LOIS.

"What's the matter with you" is partly your own fault, Lois—partly the fault of our whole sex. For endless ages we women have insisted on "believing the worst" about men. From matron to maid, from wrinkled old dowager to rosy young bride, the poison-our whisper has been passed along—"never wholly trust a man!" And so we enter marriage looking for trouble, and seeing it lurking in the most innocent act.

Most of which is sheer tommy-rot. The average man isn't any more of a cheat at heart than the average woman—nor are we women such a treat or temptation as most of us think, little sister. As you'll find to your sad surprise if you keep on nagging your nice, new toy!

A FORM OF FEAR

So all the women who've gone before you are also to blame for your fool notions, Lois. But that doesn't let you out; for you're contributing plenty of cussedness of your own—and calling it "love."

But jealousy isn't love. Jealousy isn't even sensible caution, founded on what the other fellow may do. Jealousy is simply FEAR—not of the other fellow, but of yourself—Fear that you may not have the power to hold the thing you love!

And you can't get away from that fear by making your husband take a new job; for your fear will go with you, wherever you go, and it will last until you drag it out into the open and fight it for the filthy thing it is.

So get to work on yourself, child; not on your husband.

Stop being afraid of imaginary dangers, and face the very real danger of your own sour, suspicious, cowardly nature.

No outside woman is menacing your happiness. You, yourself, are your home's greatest enemy. You, yourself, will wreck your husband's love, unless you step on the reverse—pronto!

'ANYBODY ELSE'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

To be cute, and blonde!
And when she sees Greta again! those eyes that forehead?
Pink and white and blue-eyed to be like that!
Thin face and heavy eyes - oh epitome of beauty!

"Oh to BE—anybody else but myself!" A chant of young girls.

The path that starts in the nursery, leaves the homegate, takes a flowery trail through the pleasant place called Romance, becames a watery, adventurous path over the sea of matrimony where things are pretty gusty sometimes and other times wildly, glitteringly happy, sometimes frightening to the bravest sailor, and other times dead calm like that "Painted Ocean" of the Golden Treasury of Verse, landing again to wend its way through quiet, unthrilling, but of often gratefully peaceful trails, and at last into the dim purple place over a hill that it is good we can never see until we get there, has its most colorful primrose patch of country for a woman when she is a YOUNG GIRL.

She looks back and thinks that—knows it. But while the young girl is in the midst of that perfect landscape, up to her knees in daisies and sunshine over all, full of laughter, the world showing her something lovely on every side, she finds some flaws in her state! And one of the most darksome shadow across her sunny field is her own looks. They seldom suit her.

Her own nose may be a pretty nice one, her Daddy and her Beau think so—but let her glimpse that of some young lady not of her coloring, and her own is all that makes life miserable. GRETA'S brows and eyes and forehead—oh girlish goal of beauty—are what she wishes her own to be.

Tuesday she sees a golden blonde, pink, white, azure-eyed, and until Friday Jill wants to be blonde, and it takes threats of imprisonment and disinheritance to keep her from going tow-head overnight.

She contemplates her own pretty face and finds nothing there that defines BEAUTY.

But one day, take my word, Jill, a person in tweed coat with brown hands and a rough cheek on your velvety one, will make you pretty well pleased with yourself!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Answer Not Required

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been enjoying your interesting and helpful column for some time, and at last the occasion has arisen when I have a question to ask you.

Today I received a wedding invitation from an old friend whom I have not heard from, or seen, in about three years. It requests the honor of the family's presence at 10 a. m. services; also there is an additional card inviting us to the evening reception at the church hall.

Does this require an acknowledgment, as we expect to attend? If so, in what form should the acknowledgment be?

L.

We do not need to acknowledge the invitation to the marriage ceremony in the church. This is the invitation that reads "requests the honour of your presence."

But the other invitation—the one to the reception, which "requests the pleasure of your company"—must be acknowledged. The acceptance would be worded about like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Wilson Lane accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Adamson's kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of June, at nine o'clock

Write this acknowledgment on the first page of double-sheeted letter paper, and space it as I have indicated.

Announcing an Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please inform me whether it is still proper to announce an engagement by sending to one's friends engraved announcement cards? The wedding date has not been set, and will not be for a year, or perhaps longer. H.

It never has been considered good form, my dear girl, to use the formal cards, either engraved or printed, for announcing an engagement. True, it is that some people have insisted on using them, but these cards have always been frowned on by people who know what's what. I hope that you won't consider using them.

When you get ready to announce your engagement, tell the relatives and friends who live near enough to you by word of mouth, and write charming little notes to those who live at a distance.

These notes are written a day or so before the date you have decided on for the announcement. Then, if you wish, your parents may send the formal announcement to the newspapers.

This is all that is necessary. Of course there may be parties, one by your parents to make the announcement, and following ones by relatives or friends. But these, of course, aren't necessary.

You wear your ring for the first time in public on the day you make your announcement.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Bidding Slams with the New Convention

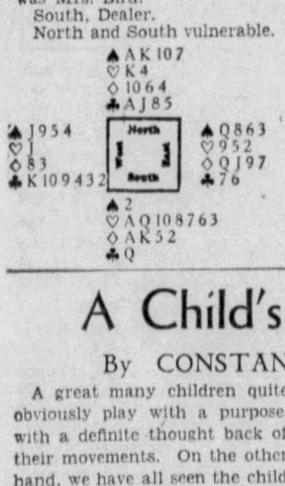
There is unquestionably a tremendous thrill to be obtained from a well-bid hand at Contract, as well as one that has been played with precision and brilliancy. My husband often says that a well-bid no-trump hand has just as much beauty as the finest Gothic cathedral. Perhaps this statement does show slight use of poetic license, but accurate inferences, conveyed through a series of bids, have an intellectual beauty of their own—perhaps not cathedral-like in character, but certainly a source of great inward satisfaction to the maker.

One of the great puzzles of Contract bidding has always been the effort to reach Grand Slams without involving the great risk of disaster. No doubt the Four-Five Notrump Forcing bids have pointed the way to reaching many safe Slams, otherwise unobtainable.

A recent example of a Grand Slam contract reached through this convention was sent me the other day by Mr. Millard F. Bird, of Nutley, N. J. He held the South hand and his partner was Mrs. Bird.

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♡ (1)	Pass	4 N T (2)	Pass
5 N T (3)	Pass	6 ♡ (4)	Pass
7 ♡ (5)	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Perhaps a slight overbid, but with average distribution there should not be more than one loser in the seven-card heart suit.

2—Using the Four-Five No-trump Convention, specifically showing the Ace of spades, the Ace of clubs and the King of spades or hearts. The hand itself, however, is a minimum force and would not justify this insistence upon playing at a slam were it not for South's jump to four hearts at once.

3—The conventional response, showing the remaining two Aces.

4—North can do no less at this point than bid six hearts, as the forcing takeout plus the embarking on the slam road accounts for the values held.

5—South reasons that if his partner can make all these bids with nothing important in the diamond suit, the hand almost certainly contains the heart King and the spade Ace-King in addition to the club Ace. The chance of making the slam is worth the risk involved.

The hand, of course, was made laid down after the club finesse was successfully taken.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You have 60 on the score. You open the bidding with one spade and your partner responds with three clubs. What do you bid, holding:

♠ K Q 10 3 ♡ A Q 6 2 ◇ 8 6 ♣ 5 3 2

Answer: Three hearts. Your partner's bid is Forcing for one round.

Ronald Tells of a Strange Signal Light

As Nick told me to drive the car along while he directed my course, I turned my head involuntarily toward the back of the car, where Tony so recently had held a revolver against my shoulder while he threatened to "drill" me if I so much as touched the controls.

Nick chuckled as he saw the movement.

"Don't worry about him, Babe," he said from the running board beside me, where he evidently meant to remain—he had told Ronald to climb in beside me—"Tony's taking orders from me just now. I've clipped his little claws. He won't scratch any more for awhile, will you sweetheart?"

A sound, half growl and half grunt, from Tony in the back seat, greeted this sally, and Nick laughed outright.

"Take a swig of that last cargo you got gypped with," he advised airily. "It'll make you feel better. Now, Babe, send the bus along till you get to the corner where we turned into this road, then turn to the left and clip along at about 30 till I tell you where to head in. No use taking a chance of getting in bad with some strange cop. We'll obey the law tonight, for a change."

He chuckled again, then spoke no more until we had rounded the corner into the main road.

"Now, Kid, tell your story," he said brusquely, and Ronald began haltingly.

RONALD RESENTFUL

"There isn't much to tell," he said. "I couldn't hear or see anything inside the car from where I was perched, but I did manage to hold on, and to throw out those bags. You must have found them," he broke off suddenly.

"Yes, indeed, dear," I said warmly. "I did find them, and I think you were perfectly wonderful to throw them down in the way you did."

"Never mind the pet names, Babe," Nick struck in stridently. "In the first place, you haven't any time to waste, and in the second, you just remember to direct them my way, and nowhere else. Go on with your spiel, Kid."

I was miserably conscious of Ronald's astonishment and anger at this familiarity of address.

"Look here!" the boy began hotly, but with my right— was driving with my left hand — I touched his knee in warning.

"Yes, do tell us what made you get off the car," I urged.

Ronald choked back something, which I knew was an indignant protest against Nick's language to me, then spoke slowly, haltingly.

"It was because the car slowed up, and I saw it was going to stop," he said. "I knew if I were discovered on the back, any use I might be to Marion would be ended. So I jumped off, meaning to run and swing myself on again as soon as the car speeded on.

TELLS ABOUT SIGNAL

"But it didn't speed up," Ronald said disconsolately. "Instead, a funny light flared up behind a hedge in front of which our car had stopped."

From the back seat of our car came a raucous voice, raised imperatively.

"Make him tell what he means by a funny light."

"Sometimes, Tony," Nick said with drawling approval, "I figure out that you're maybe one or two degrees smarter than a baboon. This is one of 'em. You're not the only one that wants to know what color those lights are. I crave information myself. It may come in handy for us some time. So spill the beans."

"It was a sort of blue that wasn't all blue," Ronald said in a puzzled tone. "Sometimes it changed to a sort of green, but it was mostly blue."

"I get you, Kid," Nick said, "and I'll remember that light. What happened after the car stopped?"

From the seat behind us Tony's voice sounded again, this time in strong excitement.

"Say! Look what those crazy aviators are doing"

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Heed Nature's Warnings of Presence of Pyorrhea

"It is not the disease, but neglect of the remedy which generally destroys health." This is an old Latin proverb. It can be applied to the prevention and treatment of pyorrhea.

Dr. Copeland

Pyorrhea is a disease of the tissues about the teeth. Gums are inflamed and laden with pus. In consequence toxins, poisonous substances, are given off and these are absorbed within the body. If neglected, serious and permanent damage results, not only to the teeth, but to other parts of the body.

Nature has a way of sending out warnings when anything is wrong with this body of ours. She runs up signals of danger. Bleeding gums is such a danger sign—it is a warning of pyorrhea. Blood on toothbrush is another one of nature's warnings.

When the gums are healthy and free from pus, they are pink, strong and resistant to pressure. If the gums become red, bluish or gray, pyorrhea may be present. Do not delay if they become swollen, spongy and bleed easily upon touch.

There are many causes for this annoying condition. Neglect of the hygiene of the mouth is the chief factor. Accumulation of tartar on the teeth, faulty fillings, ill-fitting crowns and bridges, as well as lack of proper dental care, are other causes that must not be overlooked.

The medical and dental professions now realize the relationship of faulty diet to diseased teeth and poor health, realizing that the condition of your teeth and mouth have much to do with it.

The diet should be well balanced and contain abundant fresh fruits and vegetables. Food should be chewed slowly and carefully. Brush the teeth regularly and at least twice a day. Bear in mind that if the body is kept well nourished and the mouth clean, the gums and teeth will remain normal.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of periodic visits to the dentist. Regular inspection will prevent unnecessary dental defects, insure the health of your mouth, and protect you from many constitutional disorders. X-ray examination of the teeth often reveals infection never suspected.

Do not wait until Mother Nature sends you a warning sign. Help your body maintain good health by preventive measures rather than waiting until curative measures are necessary.

Dental care is essential for the adult and child. Early dental care will prevent unnecessary suffering in adult life. Do not fail to care for the temporary teeth. It is too common a thing to neglect the "baby" teeth.

Answers to Health Queries

A. M. P. Q.—I am a young woman and have had a jerking in my left shoulder for about three or four years which has lately become more persistent. I am losing weight and seem to tire easily. Sewing or ironing seems to aggravate the trouble—what would you advise?

A.—This is probably due to neuritis. Rest should give increased comfort until your doctor locates the underlying cause. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

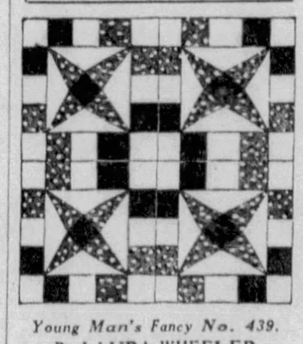
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



Young Man's Fancy No. 439.

By LAURA WHEELER

Some quilt names call to mind a definite picture, suggested by the quilt block; some recall early American history; others, like Young Man's Fancy, are the sort of names we just must believe. Young men of the past, like those of today, undoubtedly had many fancies in quilt patterns as in other things. This pattern though showed a good choice on the young man's part, for besides being a very lovely pattern when completed, it is a very simple block to make. In this way, giving in to the young man's choice was not at all a difficult task for the needlewoman.

The pattern comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for a pattern for this design to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

A Child's Play Hour

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A great many children quite obviously play with a purpose, with a definite thought back of their movements. On the other hand, we have all seen the child who plays aimlessly, knocks down his block tower, or, in a fury, tears up the picture he has drawn.

The first type of child needs but little help from the parent. In fact, his chief need is usually to be let alone to develop his original projects, with only a word of praise at good results or a gentle suggestion if the results do not turn out so well.

But the aimless, uneasy child needs the best thoughts of his mother. Mother needs to sit down and figure out the cause of his short interest pulses and his futile motions.

Many things can bring about this indefinite, purposeless play. One is the child's individual temperament. Some of us have decided ideas of what we want to do today, or in our whole life-span. Others of us merely live from day to day with no definite aims. You will find these two types of natures in children.

To me, it seems constructive and kind to the child to try to develop a certain purpose in his acts. And another major factor which threatens this is a lack of interest in what the child is doing. I don't mean you should follow every step of the child's play and exclaim over it. Far from it. But if you show an intelligent interest, you will find many ways of creating ambition to do better, and molding a definite purpose from former aimless play.

Another factor which makes for an indifferent attitude on the child's part toward his play projects is the fact that many parents unthinkingly, or willfully destroy the child's handiwork. No matter how trashy it looks to you, give the child a box in which to file away his work, or a square of burlap upon which he can pin his artistic efforts.

Eye Shadows.

Blondes have been changing eye shadows right along. First they were devoted to various shades of blue. That color was ousted by a new blue-green that gave to the lids a strange and lovely charm. Now there's a faint, delicate purple eye shadow that is all the whoopla rage. If the complexion is fair and the hair not too dark the brunette can go purplish, too.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When you sit down, sit up. Slumping in the chair is a lazy habit, ruinous to the contour of the figure. Sit far back on the chair seat. Let the backbone curve in at the waist line, permit shoulders to fall easily and naturally. Rewards will be yours.

No pilgrimage is more thrilling than that which takes a woman to the cosmetic counter. Spread before the feminine eye are intriguing toiletries—eye shadows to impart mysterious charm, lip sticks to brighten up the face-scape, powders to confer a seductive, velvety finish, extra eyelashes to fill out scanty fringes. Isn't it elegant that the phrail sex emerged from the fog of old time notions that beautifying was sinful, that Mary Jane had to stay as Mary Jane was, that a touch of carmine banished one from the respectable social fold. How dull life must have been.

A perfume atomizer should be a detail of every girl's beauty equipment. It does away with the chance of putting ring spots on pretty frocks, and it is a source of economy, though scents aren't as expensive as they were a few years back. You can get them now that are both delicate and lasting. Gardenia is still a favorite. Perfumers having run out of funny names for their wares are going back to understandable titles.

GAIN IN STEEL PRODUCTION SLOWING

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week was at about 36 per cent of total capacity, representing one point increase in the week and six points in three weeks. The rate is two and one-half times the low of this whole period, last August, and double the rate of last January, when there had been a moderate seasonal increase over December.

Increase in tonnage was very rapid in April while now the increase is slowing down since there have already been such substantial gains in the active lines, while the inactive lines, building, the railroads and the oil and gas fields, are not fixed for improvement at present.

The rate of production makes a favorable comparison from all angles as it is nearly double the rate of one year ago, is one-third above the highest rate of last year and the highest rate since June, 1931. On account of light production earlier in the year the cumulative total since January 1 is well below that of a year ago and some observers are anxious to see a favorable comparison develop in this respect. On the basis of the present rate undergoing no change total production from January 1 to June 8 will approximate that in the same period of 1932. Thereafter the gain over last year should accumulate rapidly.

PIPE, TIN PLATE ACTIVE

This week production of tin plate since January 1 reached a point of equaling last year. It is possible that wire products have already exceeded last year but there is no precise information. Standard pipe will soon show a larger total since January 1 than last year, the present rate of output being well above that of a year ago.

Any further marked increase in total steel demand will have to occur by the inactive lines becoming active. There has been scarcely any fabricated structural steel business lately outside of the Transbay Bridge at San Francisco, the federal program having been suspended two or three months ago. The new program, under the Wagner bill, is expected to produce tonnage in about three months. The outlook for railroad building is indefinite while oil and gas well drilling is in abeyance. Much pipe line work is expected when financing becomes possible.

Steel buying by the automobile trade has been at a stationary rate lately, but mills are being pressed for delliveries. Late in April a rate of production equal to fully 200,000 units a month was reached and this is expected to continue at least through the forepart of June, prolonging the high level of the season well beyond the usual time.

SHEET PRICES UP $3

Steel sellers are studying the provisions of the Wagner bill, introduced into the House last Wednesday, but can only speculate as to what will actually be done under its provisions. There is a report that under the provision for a code of fair competition steel will be taken in hand first. There is more or less disposition to mark up prices on nearly all steel products, but sellers are proceeding cautiously.

Strip mills are announcing advanced prices, effective at once and applicable also to third quarter, at 1.60c for hot rolled and 2.00c for cold rolled. Hot rolled strips were recently advanced from 1.45c to 1.55c, while cold rolled have been quotable at 1.80c to 2.00c.

Sheet mills are opening order books for third quarter at advances of $3 a ton on hot rolled, galvanized and long ternes, present prices to continue for the remainder of this quarter. The grades of auto body and furniture sheets, recently discarded, will be reinstated.

Prices of pig iron at Pittsburgh and valley furnaces have been advanced $1 per ton, making No. 2 foundry iron $10 f. o. b. Neville Island and $15.50 f. o. b. valley furnaces.

The scrap market has shown an easier tone in the last week but with no quotable change, heavy melting steel being at $11.50 to $12 as dealers' buying and selling prices respectively.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—Stocks fluctuated narrowly in dull trading today.

Industrials were slightly mixed while oils inclined slightly higher. After the recent feverish pace of the tape, the lagging tendency was extremely pronounced.

Among issues off slight fractions were United States Steel, Johns-Manville, Continental Can, Columbian Carbon and Bethlehem. American Telephone, du Pont, American Smelting, Texas Corporation, Standard Oil of California and Union Pacific were slightly improved. Call money renewed at 1 per cent.

Overnight developments which caught the attention of the financial community included the introduction of new legislation in Congress for the stabilization of the oil industry and the progress of the Glass banking bill.

Constructive news was afforded by the automobile industry. Car output during the week ending May 20, as estimated by Cram, totaled 55,801 units, an increase of 4,130 over the preceding week, and the highest weekly figure attained since the week of June 13, 1931. This was the ninth successive week that production has gained over the preceding period.

Foreign exchanges showed little change in earlier dealings. Sterling opened at $3.86¾, a gain of ½ cent, while French francs were quoted at 4.49 cents, unchanged.

HOME BUILDING SHOWS GAIN

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—F. W. Dodge Corporation today reported that residential building contracts awarded in April expanded nearly 20 per cent over March. The company said:

"This gain is of large significance when contrasted with the fact that for total construction awards, inclusive of residential, a decline of almost six per cent occurred between the two months."

April volume for construction of all types was $56,573,000 against $59,958,500 in March and $121,704,800 for April, 1932. Residential building contracts last month aggregated $19,143,600 as compared with a March total of $16,021,000 and $28,894,000 in April last year.

April awards showed gains over March in New England, upstate New York, middle Atlantic states and the Central Northwest, losses being reported in other geographical divisions. All districts showed declines from April, 1932.

Wholesale Prices Higher for April

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(INS.)—While wholesale commodity prices showed an increase of three-tenths of one per cent between March and April, retail food prices dropped one-tenth of one per cent during the same period, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

Wholesale commodity prices registered the second successive advance in recent months. Compared with April, 1932, prices, however, there was a decrease of over 7¾ per cent. With respect to retail food prices, the decrease amounted to about 12¾ per cent.

Pipe Line Crude Holdings Decline

OIL CITY, Pa., May 20.—(AP.)—The Derrick says major pipe line companies at the end of April held 3,077,945 barrels of crude oil, a decline of 91,136 barrels from the March total.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Prop

Since you are friendless, I will be your friend;
Lovers are cheap as you have cause to know;
Mine the exacting role until the end
When you are well and it is time to go;

Somewhere along the years a youth will find
That crooked paths have led him to your side,
Then I will smile to see you overkind—
And thank the fates that trails are long and wide.

So I will leave—nor beg an eulogy,
I am too close a comrade of defeat,
Yet I believe that you will think of me,
Sometimes when moon-flood riots on your street;

Musing, perhaps, about the silent lad
Who killed a dream that you might not be sad!
—Don Wahn.

It Was in Nebraska

J. E. Turner, of Kansas City, says that he heard this one on us. When we were doing the "several-a-day" circuits, we finally hit a full week stand in a medium-sized town in the Central West. We asked the hotel clerk the rates.

"Two dollars a day," was the reply.

"What are the weekly rates?" Turner says we queried.

"I don't know," said the clerk, "but I'll find out."

"What!" we ejaculated, "don't you know your own rates?"

"Well, yes," said the clerk, "but you see—nobody ever wanted to stay here a week before."

Ghost Story

For some time before his suicide, Patrick Kearney, the playwright, had been collabing on a play with Martin Mooney, part of the locale being in a morgue.

The last five minutes dealt with the doings of eight lifeless locals—just brought into the ice-box. The night before he took gas Kearney dined with Mooney. They arranged to meet the following day and continue the manuscript.

"Don't be surprised, though," remarked Kearney, "if I wind up as one of the characters in the play."

The next a. m. he did.

Stars Don't Always Shine

A group were discussing some Hollywoodians who are having it tough. One of them had received a hard luck letter from an actor out there who said that if he could borrow $40 it would help him live another two months.

"What I can't understand," said the saddened letter reader, "is why people like that want to live two months."

Boomerang

In Lindy's the other midnight, Edgar Leslie, the song writer, said:

"I see that you boys are giving Marlene Dietrich too much publicity."

"What really happened at 'Take a Chance,'" replied this column, "is this: Miss Dietrich (with her trousers) walked out on that show because Sid Silvers stood in the wings so that front rows could see him—and wore a skirt, which he kept swishing. Dietrich said that it made him obnoxious."

"Does Silvers have to wear a dress," said one of his critics, "to be obnoxious?"

Sob Story

This actually happened yesterday. One of the local radio critics hammered a well-known star in his pillar of criticism. Her husband phoned the critic.

"If you only knew," he said, "how much you hurt her and me—you wouldn't do it again. You've no idea how you've hurt me."

"Oh," replied the critic, who is easily touched, "you must be exaggerating."

"I'm not, really," almost wept the man, "come up to our house—and I'll show you the wound."

In Fewer Words

To make mistakes is human—but not one right after the other!

Geo. V's Sensayuma

They tell it about Louis Armstrong, the gayest of the blackbirds, who with his sizzling orchestra played a command performance before Britain's King and Queen.

To the amazement of everyone except the King, who laughed, Armstrong turned to him between numbers and flipped:

"Ah'm gonnna swing the nex' one fer you—Rex!"

Marxes Sign For Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, May 20.—Those mad Marxes apparently couldn't stand the idea of other comedians acting in the story they worked on so long at Paramount.

The studio hums with the news they have signed to come back and make "Duck Soup," formerly "Cracked Ice," to begin early in June. As New York wires say nothing of other pictures, the Katz deal presumably still holds good.

All the brothers will be back here before long. Harpo leaves New York Monday and Groucho, Chico and Zeppo follow three days later.

The story was practically ready to shoot when the foursome left Paramount so there will be little preliminary work.

Here's a bit of news. Leo McCarey, who has directed Eddie Cantor and several of the better comedians, will guide the new Marx opus to the screen.

Double Bill In Davis

By MARGARET RUSSELL

A well-rounded bill of fare of mystery, murder, tragedy on the one hand and light, naughty sophistication on the other, is offered in the Davis and Sheridan Square theaters this week.

"The Unwritten Law," from a story by John Kafft, is a drama of long delayed vindication by a husband whose wife ran away with the other man. In spite of some good names in the cast—Lew Cody, Mary Brian, Greta Nissen, Hedda Hopper and Louise Fazenda—it is mediocre stuff. A mystery murder in a Hollywood background, a great deal of the action takes place on a location boat, with a crystal gazer in a wrapped head making a stern contrast to Louise Fazenda at her giggliest.

"Ex-Lady," with Bette Davis, Gene Raymond and Frank McHugh, is a little better. Bette is very Constance Beunettish, but with a neat little flare of her own individuality here and there. In "Ex-Lady" she is an artist, who wants to be free till she's 40. So she succumbs to matrimony, honeymoons in Havana, finds marriage doesn't work, gets herself a separate establishment, has dates with friend husband and others, and decides that while marriage has its disadvantages, it has its good points, too.

World Plea On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Highlights of President Roosevelt's history-making message to the rulers of 54 nations, urging disarmament and peace, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. The pictures show an impressive scene in the House of Representatives as the President's plea is read by Patrick J. Haltigan, recording clerk.

Latest developments in the great "milk war" in and about Mukwonago, Wis., are shown. Special guards are seen bringing in milk trucks headed by snow plows, which are meant for battering rams should a mob try to block their path. Strikers are seen dumping milk into the road. The Globe Trotter graphically describes the conflict.

Colorful pictures show the celebration of the thirty-second birthday of the Emperor of Japan at Tokio.

The epochal flight of 20 army seaplanes from Orbetello, Italy, to the Chicago World's Fair, planned to start soon, is illustrated.

Joe Savoldi, one-time Notre Dame football star, is shown wrestling Strangler Lewis in Madison Square Garden. Time after time Joe leaps from the floor, planting both feet in Lewis' chest. But when Lewis dodges Savoldi goes out of the ring, rendering himself unconscious, and he is counted out.

The first contingent of Gold Star Mothers sails for France and are bidden farewell by Kermit Roosevelt, who speaks of his brother, Quentin, buried there.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, May 20.

To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Wish you could see the way this fellow Roosevelt handles bonus armies, feeds 'em, talks to 'em, does everything but march with 'em. They had the most orderly, quiet parade yesterday. This fellow is uncanny in knowing what to do and say under any given condition. Carter Glass, who knows more about money than any man in America, talked in the Senate on his new bank bill. It protects deposits and makes bankers responsible to each other. In other words he wants to set a banker to watch a banker, instead of leaving it to the depositor to try. He also stops banks from racketeering in trusts and holding companies. It really sounds too good to pass. Yours, WILL.

'Silver Cord' Drama In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

For about the swellest acting that one may expect to see in an ordinary "program" picture, meaning one that is not tagged a super-super special, or something of the like, you will go far before you find anything superior to the histrionic excellence of the cast in "The Silver Cord," photoplay version of the stage drama of the same title. Showing in the Stanley, it "features" Irene Dunne, but, of course, that is for appeal to movie audiences, because Laura Hope Crewes, who is scarcely known on the screen, is the central figure in the picture.

It is a strong emotional phychological study, with plenty of powerful dramatic incident and no comedy whatever. Yet it is not tragic in a lethal sense, but only in the effect that the love of a mother for her sons has on the life of one of them and his sweetheart—a separation. She plans for her boys and suffers for them and saves for them, unselfishly she believes, and has hopes of keeping them with her always. She has thoroughly mapped their careers and it involves an apron-string (silver cord) existence throughout their days.

But it doesn't work out—except partially. Her eldest comes home from abroad with his newly-wedded wife, whom the mother has never met, and who happens to be a biologist. She is not long in discovering the state of affairs, and knows that if she and her husband remain in the house even for the brief time they have allowed for their visit, the mother will alienate his love, just as her insinuations have broken the engagement of her younger son.

So it becomes a contest between the love-hungry mother and the wife who knows she is fighting not only to hold her husband, but to make a man of him. And she wins.

Miss Dunne and Miss Crewes are equally convincing in the sincerity of their portrayals, the former in a part that has sympathy of the audience, and the latter in a characterization that sinks deeply in as one realizes that it expresses both deep affection and profound lack of feeling for anyone except her sons. Frances Dee plays excellently as the fiancee of the younger son, well acted by Eric Linden. Joel McCrea is slightly less impressive as the elder.

In Gay Vienna Old Times Return

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Whoever wishes to compare Alfred Lunt with John Barrymore or Lynn Fontanne with Diana Wynyard, will have the opportunity at the Penn Theater, where the talking picture of "Reunion in Vienna" is now on view. Barrymore has the Lunt role, and does he make the Hapsburg who has turned taxi driver live up to his new vocation?

Mr. Seibel

No taxi driver ever played the insane roughneck in such belligerent style. There were moments in Lunt's characterization when he really overstepped the bounds of epilepsy. Barrymore is even rougher and madder. The picture is good propaganda for the painless extermination of royal families that have been cast into the wastebasket.

As for Diana Wynyard, with her classic beauty, she gives a more statuesque but less exotic portrayal than Lynn Fontanne. Perhaps the ethics of the picture game are less elastic. She is beautiful and acts with intelligence, which is really more than the role requires.

Robert Sherwood, who made the original play, was much concerned to put in psycho-analysis, plenty of it. Most of it has been kept in, and this romance of a prince returning after 10 years and trying to recapture his former sweetheart from her present husband affords an opportunity to exploit complexes and fixations. That will not bother the audience which sees some scenes of riotous splendor and gets an object lesson in democracy.

The picture is among the better examples of the film aspiring to be art. But aside from that fine actor Cianelli in a minor role, nobody does superlative work. Barrymore overdoes some of his scenes in outrageous fashion.

The Krazy Kat cartoon comedy is a devastatingly humorous satire on the New York subway, and there is also a fine travelogue of Cuba and a terrific racing sport film.

All in a Day

Prison Story

OUT IN THE west is a prison that has held some of the most desperate characters of all time. It is a jail of the old type, and the prisoners know none of the conveniences and laxity that some of our more modern prisons afford. There have been jail breaks there. And violence. And plenty of backstage killings. But the answer is as always; prison life goes on and the men are still behind the bars.

The warden is a man of ice. He has been threatened with death a score of times, and he has missed being blown into oblivion on more occasions than he enjoys talking about. But he seems to care very little. I think he enjoys his position and the excitement it affords. He can have my share of it with the utmost pleasure.

The man told me many stories in the not-so-distant past. I pass one of them along to you now:

In the prison about a year ago was a criminal who was doing what is known as double life. There being no death penalty in that particular state, he was sentenced to life for murder. While in jail, he killed another prisoner—and was very promptly given life a second time. It's pretty silly, of course, but no sillier than some of the other laws by which we are governed.

At any rate, you can readily imagine that this lifer was a none too friendly gentleman. Without a description from me, you can picture the man, his brain and his general outlook on life. A more desperate individual never lived.

One afternoon, while walking through the prison yard, the warden happened to pass this particular lifer. The latter man did a strange thing. He looked around furtively and addressed the warden in a low voice.

"Just a minute, warden. Don't look around. Just stand still like I wasn't talkin' to you at all."

The warden did as requested. The voice continued:

"I'm tellin' you just this much and no more. There's enough dynamite buried around here right now to blow the whole jail to pieces."

From the warden's reaction, you might have thought that the lifer had just told him it was a very nice day. The warden smiled.

"You don't say?" was his reply. "Well, all I can say to you is that—when it goes off—you're liable to go with it."

He walked away as though he were totally unconcerned. But when he reached his office, his eyes were bright and his mind was working rapidly.

This lifer wasn't lying. The warden knew that because the same thing had happened to him several times in his experience. The lifer was going to bargain with him when the opportunity arose. He was going to spill the information about where the stuff was buried, and he was going to ask partial freedom in return.

The latter request, of course, would be out of the question. The man was in for two murders and there wasn't a chance in the world for a pardon or a shortening of the sentence. The lifer probably knew that just as well as the warden, but he was clutching at a straw and hoping against hope. What did he have to lose?

You can appreciate the seriousness of the situation. The warden couldn't bargain with the man, but neither could he delay too long in finding that dynamite. He would have to bully the criminal into spilling the details, but would have to be friendly in order to get the man to talk. It was hardly what you might term a picnic.

On the following afternoon, instead of sending for the lifer and possibly spoiling everything, the warden again walked through the yard. He wouldn't speak to the criminal. He would merely walk in his direction in the hope that the man would speak again.

He did. The action of the previous afternoon was repeated.

"I'm giving you the straight dope on the stuff, warden," whispered the lifer. "What will you promise me if I tell you just where it's buried?"

The warden shrugged his shoulders.

"Don't be a fool," was his cold reply. "I'm telling you again that, when it goes off, you'll fly just as high as I do. Tell me where it is and I'll make you two promises. One is that nobody will ever know who supplied the information. And the other is that I will try and make things a little easier for you from now on."

The lifer was disappointed. He had hoped for many things. He said so several times. But the warden didn't appear to be particularly interested. And in the end, the lifer told the story.

"I can't point," he muttered. "Too many guys watching, and my life wouldn't be worth a cent if they suspected. You just keep turning slowly, and when you face the spot, I'll stop you."

The warden did as he was requested.

"There," whispered the convict. "Just to the left of the wing you're facing. It's buried right here at the foot of the tree with the little fence around it. You'll find it there, but don't forget your promises."

"I never forget," replied the warden shortly. He walked rapidly away . . .

That night, two things happened. One was that the warden—alone and in overalls—went out to the designated spot and found the dynamite in question. And the other was that the lifer, very possibly worried about what he had done, went into a fit of temporary insanity and was taken in charge by the doctor and several trusties.

Within 48 hours, the lifer was normal again—or as normal as he could be. What he didn't know was that, while he had been out of his mind, he had babbled the whole story several times in front of the doctor and the trusties.

He asked to see the warden. And when he walked into the office, he was a nervous wreck.

"You double-clossed me, warden," he said hoarsely. "You swore you wouldn't tell anybody who tipped you off. But now you've started on your dynamite investigation, and plenty of guys seem to know that I squealed.

"I hear rumblings, warden. They'll kill me sure. They'll kill me, I tell you, because you double-crossed me!"

The warden looked up.

"I have never broken my promise to any man, Williams," he said evenly, "and I did not break my promise to you. It is very possible that the men do know that you gave out the information. But they don't know it through me. It's you who told them!

"The other night, when you were mentally ill, you talked and talked and talked. The doctor tried to stop you, but you wouldn't let him. So it was you—and not I—who squealed on yourself!"

Exactly one hour later, the lifer hanged himself in his cell. Fear of the other prisoners had done it. Thus, ironically enough, the information he had given to make life a little easier had only resulted in making death a little harder. . . .

Stage Guild to Give 'Another Language'

The summer theater organization that will present plays twice weekly at the Willows, Oakmont, has obtained the right to stage "Another Language" as the opening attraction, Monday, June 19. The group has changed its title to The Stage Guild instead of Pittsburgh's Professionals. Alexander Kann and Harold Daniels have just returned from New York, where they acquired local rights to "Another Language," "Biography," "Three-Cornered Moon" and other plays. One of the local members of the company will be Alma Lind, formerly associated with Mrs. Fiske. Mrs. Madge Belount MacQueen will be the director.

Plays and Players

MILLER LOOMS AS CHOCOLATE THREAT

EVEN IF IT may be said that a going-back on the part of Fidel La Barba had made Seaman Watson, when he defeated the Californian, appear to be a better fighter than he really is, Kid Chocolate must be given credit for having turned in a neat bit of fistic workmanship last night to win the decision over Watson and retain what New York calls the world featherweight championship. None but an exceptionally fast and capable ring mechanic could have turned back the British challenger, especially over such an extended route as 15 rounds, where ruggedness and stamina counted, and it is evident that in spite of all the slipping tales that were told of him, Chocolate still has much of his old speed and cleverness.

Freddie Miller

But that victory doesn't pull the Keed's title out of danger nor leave him sitting on his throne in safety. There is a more dangerous challenger than Watson to be reckoned with in the person of Freddie Miller, The Cincinnati battler, holding the N. B. A. featherweight honors, has been going great guns on the Coast. Within a few months he has defended his title successfully six times, losing only a non-title bout to Abie Israel when one of his hands was injured. Miller looks all over like a real champion, and Chocolate will have no clear title to the world honors until he has defeated Freddie. The two ought to make one of the best fights in the recent years of the class.

THE PIRATES WERE due to drop a game after grabbing four in a row and eight of the first nine on the home grounds, so the loss of the first bout in the Brave series was not disturbing. At that they went down fighting, and probably would have got away with their uphill battle but for the pernicious activity of the still marvelous 41-year-old Rabbit Maranville.

The second defeat of Waite Hoyt within a week, and his third in succession, might have caused some uneasiness if a couple of the other Pirate pitchers had not recently given evidence of being ready for starting duty. After all, it was mainly for relief work that Hoyt was signed, and even if he doesn't regain his grip as a starter he still will be useful in rescue roles.

BILL M'KECHNIE has a much better ball club than its position below the .500 mark would indicate. The Braves are strong in pitching and fielding, and are down only because the whole outfit has been in a spring batting slump.

Jow Mowrey, the new outfielder from Minneapolis, looks like a real ball player and a hustler who should strengthen the club all around. As soon as some of the other regulars start hitting the Braves will make plenty of trouble.

A DEBATE HAS been started by John Kieran among Eastern critics as to what great outfields of the past could be compared with Waner, Lindstrom and Wcer, admittedly unrivaled at present. Among those already mentioned are Speaker, Hooper and Lewis; Cobb, Crawford and Veach; Ruth, Meusel and Combs; Delehanty, Thompson and Hamilton; Shechard, Hofman and Schulte, and Simmons, Hass and Miller. It would require no stretching of points to add to the list of great outfields Keeler, Kelley and Brodie; Duffy, McCarthy and Bannon, and Burkett, McAleer and Blake. And it strikes local fans that Pittsburgh had some pretty fair ones in Clarke, Beaumont and Wagner; Clarke, Beaumont and Davis; Clarke, Beaumont and Sebring; Clarke, Carey and Wilson; Carey, Bigbee and Southworth, and Carey, Bigbee and Cuyler.

Alvin Crowder

IT IS SAID that one of the factors that led to the sale of Pitcher George Pipgas by the Yankees to the Red Sox was his inability to beat the Indians. Joe McCarthy evidently figures Cleveland a dangerous rival this year and wants to grab as many games as possible in the season's series with the Peckinpaughs.

In connection with the strength or weakness of various pitchers against certain clubs, it is held that the outstanding present-day case of one hurler's having the Comanche sign on a particular opponent is that of Alvin Crowder, of the Senators, against the White Sox. Crowder beat the Pale Hose eight times in a row last season and once this year.

MORE THAN ONE big league manager will be kicking himself if Dusty Cooke's throwing arm measures up to major loop requirements in his return to the American League as a member of the Red Sox outfield. It was only because of a belief that his whip was gone that Cooke was waived on by 15 clubs.

So far, since the Red Sox obtained him from Newark, Cooke has given evidence that he is able to throw as well as ever.

THERE WAS A notable gathering of former welterweight fistic champions at a welcome luncheon given to Jimmy McLarnin, present title aspirant, on his arrival in Los Angeles to complete training for his attempt to unseat Young Corbett one week from next Monday. Featuring the group was Tommy Ryan, welter champion from 1894 to 1896 and later middleweight king until he retired in 1907. Joining with him were Aaron Brown, or Dixie Kid, who defeated Joe Walcott in 1904 when Joe was the reigning king; Mickey Walker, who took the title from Jack Britton in 1922; Young Jack Thompson, who won the crown from Jackie Fields in 1930 and again from Tommy Freeman in 1931, and Fields himself, also a two-time title holder, who unhorsed Joe Dundee in 1929 and Lou Brouillard in 1932, and was dethroned this year by Young Corbett.

THERE WAS A wide range of ages among the assembled exchamps. Ryan, now a wealthy real estate owner in Culver City, Cal., is 63. Dixie Kid is 60, while Walker is drawing on to 33, Thompson is 29, McLarnin 27 and Fields 26. Thompson, reported in good shape again, is talking of trying a comeback.

Walker also is eager to get going again. Mickey held three titles in his time—welter, middle and light-heavy—and thinks he could regain the 175-pound championship if Rosenbloom would meet him.

FROM HARNESS-RACING headquarters comes the bulletin that 500 foals destined to become trotters or pacers have arrived this spring and now the owners are scratching their heads trying to think up names for them. Naming such horses is a harder task than you might suppose.

Charles F. Adams

Several hundred thousand names have been registered in the past, and owners, of course, are prohibited from selecting a name previously recorded. Often an owner finds that a name he fancies has been used before, and finally he may be forced to adopt one that he does not like in the least. More than $50,000,000 is invested in harness racing and close to 15,000 horses are in training.

THOUGH HE LOST his place on the Board of Governors in the National Hockey League, that fact does not mean that Charles F. Adams, Boston ice magnate, and vice president of the Braves, was the loser in his feud with Frank Calder, league president. On the contrary, reports coming out of the recent secret meeting of the league in Boston indicate that Adams got the decision to the extent that, while still president, Calder no longer is the real administrative head. The appointment of Frank Patrick to be supervisor of officiating and general disciplinarian is held to signal the gradual departure of Calder from his position as the big boss of major hockey. For it is understood that Calder hereafter will look after only the business affairs of the league, and Patrick will handle all other duties. Adams for years has been fighting for the appointment of a man other than Calder to be in charge of the referees.

BUTLER FLASH QUALIFIES IN THREE EVENTS

By JESS CARVER

Ballentine, of Butler, won the qualifying trial heats in both the high and low hurdles and placed second to Fagler, South Union ace, in qualifying for the 100-yard wash semi-finals as the annual W. P. I. A. L. track and field championships opened at the Pitt Stadium this morning.

Winners in today's meet, which is being staged on a fairly fast track under almost ideal weather conditions, will represent the league, which is District VII of the P. I. A. A., in the state championships at Altoona next week.

In winning his trial heat in the "century," Fagler paved the way for a renewal of his sprint feud with Pryor, of Ford City, sensational Negro cinder scorcher. The summary:

120-yard high hurdles, first heat—Won by Ballentine, Butler; Hustead, Uniontown, second; Fox, Greensburg, third. Time, 16.5 seconds.

Second heat—Won by Demaro, Connellsville; Byers, Uniontown, second; Hall, East Huntingdon Township, third. Time, 17.5 seconds.

100-yard dash, first heat—Won by Fagler, South Union; Ballentine, Butler, second; Fiorentine, South Fayette, third. Time, 10.3 seconds.

Second heat—Won by Sherman, Butler; Jones, Mt. Pleasant, second; Greaves, Duquesne, third. Time, 10.6 seconds.

Third heat—Won by Lewis, Rankin; Pollack, South Union, second; Kaufman, Evans City, third. Time, 10.6 seconds.

Fourth heat—Won by Welsh, Ellwood City; Pogue, Braddock, second; Johnson, Latrobe, third. Time, 10.6 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles, first heat—Won by Sherman, Butler; H. Brooks, Greensburg, second; Bell, Latrobe, third. Time, :28 seconds.

Second heat—Won by Everhart, Uniontown; Fox, Greensburg, second; Leech, Butler, third. Time, 28.1 seconds.

Third heat—Won by R. Brooks, Greensburg; Morgan, Wilkinsburg, second; Byers, Uniontown, third. Time, 27.9 seconds.

NEW CASTLE OUT

The meet today is without a defending champion. New Castle, which won the title a year ago by two-thirds of a point over New Brighton, is not supporting track this spring, and with the Lawrence Countians out of it, the affair looms as a dog fight. Anyone of half a dozen teams may come crashing through to win the trophy.

Coach Todd Lloyd's star weight man from Ellwood City, Mike Paal, who set a new shot record in the Pitt Interscholastics a couple weeks back, will go after the W. P. I. A. L. mark this afternoon with an excellent chance of cracking it. The record has been bettered annually for the past three years and now stands at 16 feet 9 inches.

E. HUNTINGTON STRONG

If any school is to be set up in advance as a favorite, the East Huntington Township entry looks to have as sweet a chance as any to pile up enough points to win, although Ellwood City, Ford City, South Union and Greensburg figure definitely in the rating.

Following are last year's winners and their marks:

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: DEATH WITNESS TO HIMSELF—Dr. Leopoldo Grassig, philologist, philosopher and physician, was a native of Kingston in Jamaica, where he was born about 1850. He practiced medicine in Milan, Italy, since 1885. While on his dying bed in 1909 the serene old scholar suddenly rose, and, addressing his entourage, remarked that he always had wanted to sign his own death certificate. As he affixed his name to the blank those present remarked the extraordinary steadiness of his hand. One minute later, he was dead, having set a novel record of medical dignity and composure.

RIPLEY SEES PIRATES' HOMES

(Robert Ripley, cartoonist, who won fame with his "Believe It Or Not" drawings, is touring Latin America by airplane in search of new material. What he sees and hears and learns he is cabling daily to the United States.)

By ROBERT RIPLEY

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NUEVITAS, Cuba, May 20.—I have just finished another Believe It Or Not cartoon. Oh, this is not a pleasure trip. I have been working at my drawing board each day. The air over water is very smooth.

With the aid of imagination it is easy to look down and see the wakes of old Pirate ships that used to plow the blue waters of the Caribbean Sea below us. We are sailing over the ancient pathway of the gold-laden galleons of Spain and the low rakish craft of the Buccaneers.

Now, far to the right is Santo Domingo, the home of the Buccaneers. The name comes from the word "Bucan," which means bacon. A buccaneer is simply a "bacon eater."

"Fifteen men on a dead man's chest, yo, ho, ho, and a bottle of rum."

Which reminds me that I saw the "dead man's chest" yesterday. It is a little low island resembling a dead man, and is located near Nevis, where Alexander Hamilton was born.

Santo Domingo, the land where men cast no shadows, the voodoo, and the black emperors, Toussaint and Christophe. The plane stopped a while at Port-Au-Prince. It was Flag Day, and from every pole waved the red and blue flag of the Haitiens.

The flag originally was the tricolor of France, but when Toussaint drove the whites out he dramatically tore the white out of the flag also.

Near Cape Haitien, Christophe built a fortified castle with one wall 2,000 feet high. Here he lived with dusky royalty of his own creation and an army so highly trained that he marched a company over the wall to their death, just to show a visitor their discipline.

But tell me, why is it flying over rural places that all the people run out of their houses and all the animals run in?

A cow and a woman met head-on at the door of a hut a few miles back. Another mystery.

Right below us is a lonely dugout canoe. It is hard to believe that this small boat is able to travel hundreds of miles between islands, through storms and hurricanes, without any means of navigation, except native instinct.

With the aid of a glass, I made out the name painted across the bow—"Lot O' Good Luck"—which probably explains this miracle of navigation. As they say in Puerto Rico, "Anque Usted No Lo Crea."

U. S. CLINCHES CUP SERIES

MONTREAL, May 20.—(AP.)—The United States Davis Cup team advanced another step in quest of the famous international tennis trophy as George Lott, Jr., and John Van Ryn yesterday defeated Marcel Rainville and Dr. Jack Wright, of Canada, to clinch the North American zone final and send the team into the inter-zone final against Argentina at Washington, D. C., next week. The score was 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 as the invading team registered its third straight and decisive victory.

Two more singles matches will be played today, with Vines meeting Wright and Allison matching strokes with Gilbert Nunns.

The veteran doubles combination was as effective as Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison were in scoring singles triumphs Thursday. Less than 45 minutes of battling was sufficient to give Lott and Van Ryn their victory.

Rainville and Wright made a brave stand against the smooth-working Americans but they were outclassed.

SOUTH AFRICA WINS

BASEL, Switzerland, May 20.—(AP.)—South Africa won the first two singles matches of its Davis Cup tennis series with Switzerland yesterday.

The first home double-header of the current baseball campaign is on the Forbes Field books for this afternoon, the event to bring together George Gibson's league-leading Pirates and Bill McKechnie's snappy Braves. The first contest is scheduled to get under way at 1:45 o'clock.

Boss Gibson has selected Heinie Meine and Bill Swift as hurlers for the dual bill. Skipper Bill, of the Boston Minute Men, is likely to call upon Huckleberry Betts and Ben Cantwell for slab duty.

Thanks to an eleventh hour drive by Gabby Street's Cardinals, the Pirates did not suffer any loss of ground to the Giants yesterday in their 5-3 defeat at the hands of McKechnie's hustling club. The Pirates still retain a lead of one and one-half games over the New Yorkers.

After winning four games in a row, the Buccos were due to drop a contest as they challenged the Braves, but had it not been for the perennial Rabbit Maranville, the Oaklanders probably would have copped the inaugural with the New Englanders.

RABBIT HAS FIELD DAY

Maranville was all over the second-base area in quest of 10 chances and he engineered a perfect squeeze play which gave the Braves the run that stood out as the winning run when the contest ended.

Rabbit, making a featured one-hand putout in the heated ninth, seems to have saved the contest for the Boston nine and Rabbit's skillful number was the indirect cause of the ejection of Manager Gibson from the field.

The Pirates entered the ninth trailing by two runs. After having killed off three or four Buccos hits, Maranville failed to come up with Tony Piet's hard smack to start the ninth and when Tommy Padden singled, the home

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Among the things that strike me pink are the Boston Red Sox stepping out and spending money for players. Up to now, when the Sox went after strength all they could offer was cigar coupons, a couple of pocket knives and maybe a string of glass beads. But now the Boston club has a guy with $3,000,000 owning it and he ain't hoarding his gold, either.

Nick Altrock

Boston is a grand baseball town, and if it ever got a first-division team the fans would overflow the ball park and stand knee-deep in the Charles River to see 'em. But until this season the Red Sox were as sure to be in the cellar as next year's coal. I mean surer!

But at the risk of sounding like a market letter, I want to say this year the Red Sox look good for the long pull, just like George Bernard Shaw's whiskers.

RAMEY SHOWS CLASS IN BEATING DUBLINSKY

WES TOO FAST FOR CHICAGO OPPONENT

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, the lightweight boxer who recently defeated Tony Canzoneri, the world champion, in a non-title match, gave the local fans one of the classiest exhibitions of boxing skill seen here in years at the Arena, on the North Side, last night, but was lucky to get the decision over Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, whom he had beaten twice before in Grand Rapids.

Ramey won from here to Grand Rapids and back again, but at the finish one judge, Frank Brown, voted for Dublinsky as the winner, while the other one, Mike Moran, was on the fence and called it a draw. Luckily, the deciding vote was up to Referee Al Grayber, and he cast it where it belonged, in Ramey's ballot box.

CROWD WITH LOSER

Dublinsky did not win a round of the 10 and held his own in only one, the eighth. In the ninth, Ramey's best round, Harry was battered from pillar to post and wound up the session going to the wrong corner.

It was one of those fights in which the crowd goes for the underdog and hails his every effort, successful or otherwise, and deprecates the work of the winner. In previous showings here, Dublinsky knocked out Frankie Bojarski and really defeated Tony Falco, although the latter got the decision. Last night he looked like a selling plater before the speed and sheer boxing wizardry of the Grand Rapids boxing master. As a matter of fact, he was merely going through the motions and winding up absolutely nowhere, frequently with his back to his opponent.

FOOTWORK DAZZLING

Ramey hit his man at will with either hand, always being set to deliver any sort of a punch and mixing innumerable jabs with hooks and uppercuts and crosses. His footwork was dazzlingly amazing, giving him the balance of a ballet dancer and carrying him in and out of hitting range. He was so far superior to the Ramey who defeated Battling Gizzy at the Meyers Bowl a year or so ago that there was no comparison. He just simply outclassed his man, whether or not the crowd and the judges appreciated this fact, and it was no trick for any judge of boxing worth to realize how he had managed to defeat such a good champion as Canzoneri.

Victor though he was, the classy Ramey did not come out of the bout unscathed. He had a cut on his left eye, opened in a bit of mixing at close quarters in the third round, and bled from the nose following a similar exchange in the sixth. The crowd particularly resented the fact that he was able to tie up Dublinsky whenever he chose at close quarters, where Harry had his only chance to do any damage.

The bout started off slowly and was tame in the first few rounds, but gradually gathered momentum and was keenly interesting in the latter stages. Ramey weighed 136¾ pounds and Dublinsky 138 at 3 p. m.

RED BRUCE WINS

Abe Meyer Lichenstein, of Rochester, N. Y., lacked aggressiveness and dropped the six-round semi-final to Red Bruce, local Negro middleweight, on the referee's decision, one of the judges, Moran, voting for a draw.

Mike Sankovitch, Canonsburg heavyweight, knocked out Carl Gross, of Braddock, midway in the second round with a short right to the jaw which cut the inside of Gross' mouth.

The judges also disagreed in the second bout, in which one of them and the referee voted for Elmer Wilson, East End Negro lightweight, over Johnny Hazel, whereas Hazel had won handily. The decision brought down a storm of boos which prevented the announcing of the following bout.

Harry Weekley defeated Joey Chemes in the six-round opener.

The crowd was fair in size. Tommy Freeman and Frankie Goosby were introduced before the main bout and a double windup was announced for next Friday night, with Pete De Grasse meeting Petey Sarron and Mose Butch boxing Antol Kocsis in 10-rounders.

Rabbit Maranville and Waite Hoyt and the latter's bride were among the ringsiders.

Fight Results

At Arena, North Side—Wesley Ramey won referee's decision over Harry Dublinsky, 10 rounds; Red Bruce won referee's decision over Abe Meyer Lichenstein, 6 rounds; Mick Sankovitch knocked out Carl Gross, 2 rounds; Elmer Wilson won referee's decision over Johnny Hazel, 6 rounds; Harry Weekley defeated Joey Chemes, 6 rounds.

At New York—Kid Chocolate defeated Seaman Tom Watson, 15 rounds, retained New York State recognition as world featherweight champion; Nick Scalba defeated Lou Fox, 4 rounds; Frankie Klick knocked out Tony Scarpati, 4 rounds; Murray Brandt defeated Al Lewis, 4 rounds; Ray Meyers defeated Joe Ferranti, 4 rounds; Joe Consigio knocked out Al Mangiapan, 1 round; Mike Belloise defeated Joe Regis, 4 rounds; Carmen Knapp defeated Ray Napolitano, 8 rounds.

At Toronto—Roger Bernard knocked out Tommy Bland, 5 rounds.

At Detroit—Marty Simmons defeated Lefty Louie Mays, 10 rounds.

At St. Louis—Al Stillman defeated James J. Braddock, 10 rounds; Joe Forchione and Tony Vivians drew, 8 rounds; Frankie Hughes and Joey Bluff drew, 4 rounds; Jackie Sharkey and Howard Scott drew, 4 rounds; Allen Mathews knocked out Tommy Jones, 3 rounds.

At San Francisco—Young Tommy defeated Speedy Dado, 10 rounds; Mickey Evans defeated Charley Hernandez, 4 rounds; Chick Delanes defeated Baby Nationalista, 4 rounds; Millo Millotti defeated Tom Jefferies, 6 rounds.

At Baltimore—George Ekalis knocked out Frank Sisky, 3 round; Harry Boldy knocked out Jimmy Duncan, 1 round.

Between Rounds

Boxers from Al Sands A. C., of Uniontown, and from the Radacy A. C., of Brownsville, and the 40 and 8 Club, of California, Pa., will make up the eight bouts which will mark the close of the amateur boxing season in Cramer's Arcade in Brownsville next Tuesday night.

Twelve bouts make up the amateur boxing card for the Westinghouse Clerks' Association in the East Pittsburgh Cafeteria tonight, as follows: Frank Salek vs. Henry Urban, Anthony Barr vs. C. De Santo, Johnny Tirpak vs. George Martzo, William Miller vs. Jimmy Ferry, Jimmy Bentz vs. Frank Karnish, Clyde Porreca vs. F. Ricard, Oscar Ferrari vs. Thomas Nicholas, Regis Golden vs. Steve Nickleach, Jimmy O'Brien vs. Frank McLaughlin, Ben Lysacek vs. Woodrow White and Lloyd Walcott vs. Henry Kiena.

Tommy Freeman worked out yesterday in the Pittsburgh Lyceum and will continue to get in his licks there today and tomorrow for his 10-round battle with Ted Yarosz at Hickey Park Monday night. He says he is in the best shape he ever has attained for a battle in Pittsburgh and is confident he will win.

James (Red) Mason, former dean of local boxing managers, now is handling Jack King, of Little Rock, and writes that he wants to match King with the winner of Monday's fight. King has fought both twice, and lost all of the decisions, yet a lot of the fans thought he really had the better of his first fight with Yarosz here and both of his meetings with Freeman at Hot Springs were so close that the decision was disputed.

Mason makes a proposition to the effect that he will give $50 out of King's purse to Father Cox's fund if Jack gets a match with Monday's winner and doesn't grab the decision, and suggests that his opponent make the same arrangement.

Patsy Severo is off the Hickey Park card for Monday, because of a bad ear, and Ross Grier, of Akron, will take his place against Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, in the eight-round semi-final.

Turtle Creek Wins County Track Title

Turtle Creek High School's track and field team easily captured the county high school championship in the annual meet at Schenley Oval yesterday, piling up a total of 76 points. Elizabeth was second with 57; Pitcairn, third with 28, and Glassport, fourth with 17.

In the junior meet, North Fayette captured top honors by scoring 51 points. West View was second with 29 and Ingram third with 27.

In the senior meet, Bennett, of Bridgeville, set a new record for the high jump with a leap of five feet 10 inches.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

This is the season of the year when many of the northern golf courses which have experienced all sorts of adverse weather conditions have put into practice the ruling that balls should be teed up through the fairway to save the turf. No doubt, the average club member would chop a golf course to pieces if he were obliged to play his ball from the sloppy and tough lies one gets at this season of the year, and, for the sake of the condition of the course, it probably is well to have this temporary ruling.

Francis Ouimet

However, I firmly believe that as a medium for assisting the player to improve his game it is a bad thing. Naturally, everyone, after he has driven a ball down the center of the fairway, likes to find his ball lying well. It sort of gives him the necessary inspiration to play a fine shot to a green because he feels it would be a shame to waste a good drive and a fine lie. Therefore, the average player at this time of the year is quite likely to return flattering scores which do not begin to tell the true value of his general play, because, once the free lift is withdrawn and players are on their own, the average player finds it much more difficult to play from a close or cuppy lie, and, as a result, his game suffers.

I have one friend in particular that I like to beat, but he is a master man at manipulating his bisques, and the handicap he receives in bisques, together with the tee-ups over the 18-hole course, have been a little too much for me. However, better times are in store, I believe, and as soon as we can play the ball where it lies, I have every confidence I can put my opponent in his proper place.

PRACTICE FROM BAD LIES

What he and many others fail to do is to practice from bad lies. Consequently, when they get a lie which would be a normal fairway lie, they can hit the ball reasonably well, but the moment they have a bad uphill or downhill stance or some position that appears awkward to them, they are absolutely lost.

I have repeated this story before, I believe, but Tony Torrence, the well-known English amateur, has a peculiar habit of putting his ball in very bad spots when practicing various shots. Instead of getting himself out on the teeing ground or fairway and placing a ball to satisfy himself, he drops them around here and there and even goes so far as to gently step on a few of them to see if he can pick them out of the holes they are in. Possibly 75 per cent of the shots he plays under these conditions are poor. That is to say, he gets little satisfaction and no thrill because of the very poor lie he picked out, which, of course, resulted in a miserable feeling and wretched-looking shot. However, when he gets on the regular course in competition, any lie he receives on the way around will look great compared to those he tried out in practice.

TEACHES THE PLAYER

Therefore, I would suggest to those who wish to hold up their end in friendly competitions that they get out on some practice tee and drop the balls any place but on a good lie. This will make the playing of their round a little later a much more enjoyable affair because they will miss fewer shots. For myself, I would much prefer, even in the spring time, to play the ball from bad spots because I do believe it teaches the player to hit with more firmness, whereas, with a nicely teed-up ball, carelessness is quite likely to creep in, and furthermore, a flabby and indecisive shot is quite likely to be struck.

KLEIN'S HOMER BRINGS DEFEAT OF LUCAS

Associated Press.

As long as they have Chuck Klein and a few other mighty clouters on their pay roll, the Phillies look like a team which can make a lot of trouble for the National League hopefuls even though they are in last place.

The Phils haven't been getting as good pitching as their rivals when expert elbowing has been the deciding point in most of the games and so far their hitters haven't been able to do a great deal of damage. The record shows only nine victories in 30 starts.

CHUCK'S BLOW WINS

They gave an example of what may be expected of them almost any time, in spite of this poor showing, when Klein finished the Cincinnati Reds with one mighty wallop yesterday and broke a five-game losing streak with a 5-to-4 victory. With the score tied in the ninth, Klein caught one of Red Lucas' pitches on the nose for his seventh home run of the season and scored behind Dick Bartell to win the game.

The victory again dropped the Reds into a fourth-place tie with the St. Louis Cardinals, who rallied brilliantly to defeat the New York Giants, 8 to 7, in a 10-inning slugfest. Left behind by Mel Ott's homer with the bases full, the Cards put over five runs in the eighth to tie the score, then went on to win.

Boston's Braves gave the elder league another upset when they fell on Waite Hoyt for three runs in the opening inning and handed the league leading Pittsburgh Pirates a 5 to 3 setback.

The Brooklyn Dodgers and the Cubs were rained out at Chicago.

The rampant Philadelphia Athletics, piling up nine runs for the second day in succession, hung out the storm warnings for the American League as they walloped the Cleveland Indians, 9 to 2. They piled up 13 blows off three Cleveland pitchers while Leroy Mahaffey held the powerful Indians to five hits.

CHISOX BURY NATS

The Chicago White Sox, recovering quickly from the first Athletic onslaught, handed the Washington Senators an even worse trimming along the same order. They gathered 17 hits and buried the Nationals under a 10 to 1 score as Paul Gregory pitched five-hit ball.

The New York Yankees meanwhile increased their lead over the deadlocked Indians and Senators by taking a 6 to 5 decision from the St. Louis Browns after a close call. Homers by Bill Dickey and Ben Chapman enabled them to pull through when Don Brennan weakened in the last two frames after pitching four-hit ball for eight innings and fanning 12.

Detroit's Tigers found two big innings enough to win from the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 5. They scored three runs in the fifth to tie the score and added four more in the seventh.

While the high schoolers are battling here in the Stadium, the Pitt and Tech varsity teams will see action abroad. Pitt meets Notre Dame at South Bend and Carnegie invades Philadelphia for a clash with Temple University.

In other meets, Wash-Jeff and West Virginia duel at Morgantown; Geneva engages Muskingum at New Concord, O., and Waynesburg faces Grove City at Grove City.

Cartmell Through As Coach at State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., May 20.—(AP.)—Nate J. Cartmell's resignation as assistant professor of physical education and coach of the Penn State College track and cross country teams, has been accepted by the executive committee of the college board of trustees.

The resignation, which is to take effect at the end of the academic year, was presented about six weeks ago to President R. D. Hetzel, as the result of failure to agree on matters of policy with Hugo Bezdek, director of physical education.

It ends Cartwell's 10-year association with Penn State athletics.

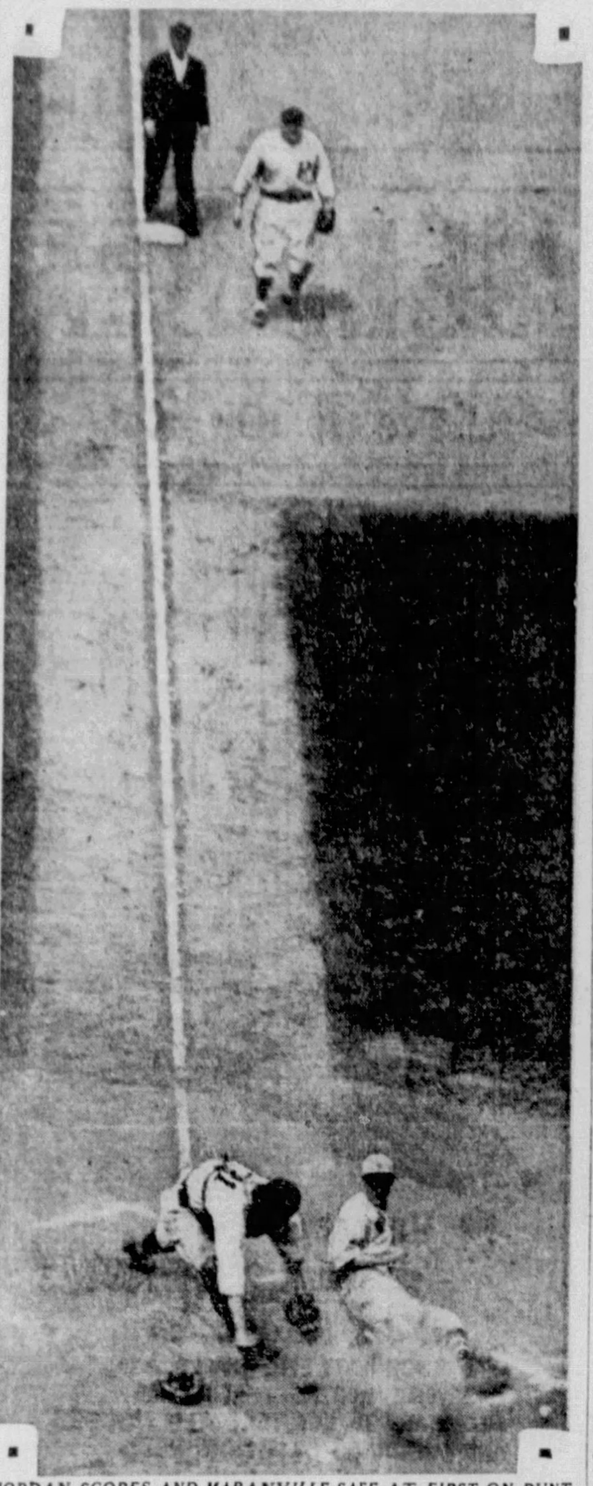
SWIFT IN BEST TRAIL

Jack Swift, three-letter star at Brentwood High, turned in the fastest time in the 100-yard trials of the Allegheny County scholastic track and field meet at the Schenley Oval yesterday. Swift won his heat in 10.3. Swift also stars in basketball and football.

Rabbit Works 'Squeeze'



JORDAN SCORES AND MARANVILLE SAFE AT FIRST ON BUNT

This is the play that pointed out the exit sign for Waite Hoyt, of the Pirates, against the Braves at Forbes Field yesterday. With one out and two on bases in the third inning, Rabbit Maranville bunted toward first and was safe as Jordan scored from third, beating Suhr's throw to the plate. The Braves won, 5 to 3. Wolverines Place 15 Men on Finals

EVANSTON, Ill., May 26.—(AP.)—Willis Ward, Michigan's 196-pound Negro all-round star, led a parade of 15 Wolverines into the finals of the Western Conference's thirty-third track and field championship meet today.

Ward, looked upon as the athlete to provide the winning points in Michigan's struggle to retain the title, qualified in three events yesterday, winning his heats in the 100-yard dash and the 120-yard high hurdles, and finishing runner-up to another Negro ace, John Brooks, of Chicago, in the broad jump.

Duane Purvis, of Purdue, a star forward passer in football, cut loose with a throw of 208 feet, 5¼ inches in the javelin. The effort, which will stand for the finals, wiped out the old Conference record of 207 feet 7 3-5 inches set by Northrop, of Michigan, in 1926.

Indiana, rated as the team to press and even beat Michigan for the team championship, made eight places. Ohio State placed 12 and Illinois nine.

WATSON LOSES TO CHOCOLATE IN TITLE GO

NEW YORK, May 20.—(AP.)—There was none today to question Seaman Tom Watson's gallantry under fire, but it takes more than that to whip dusky Kid Chocolate; the Cuban still is featherweight champion of the world in the eyes of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Outspeeded, outreached, outhit and outboxed, Watson was decisively beaten by the Cuban flash in a 15-round title bout in Madison Square Garden last night, but he made not a few new friends by his willingness and courage.

For six rounds it appeared as though a new champion might be crowned as Watson belabored the Negro about the body, had him holding on, and generally seemed to have the situation fully under control.

Apparently realizing his title was slipping away, Chocolate turned on more speed, starting with the seventh round, outboxed the pale Briton at long range and outgunned him in the numerous exchanges in close. It still was anybody's fight, however, until the tenth round, when Chocolate landed the one really decisive punch of the bout.

Uncorking a furious two-fisted attack, the Cuban caught Watson on the jaw with a looping left and Watson went down, badly hurt. He bounced up at the count of two, however, only to take a terrific pasting for the rest of the round. The Seaman was shaky when he went to his corner and it took him another round to recover from this battering.

Watson was far from through, however, and held his own in the last four rounds, winning the twelfth and fourteenth, but dropping the thirteenth and fifteenth.

Chocolate weighed 123½, Watson 125½, a half pound under the class limit. A crowd of 12,000 contributed to a gate of about $30,000.

SKIBO NETTERS MEET GROVERS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The varsity racqueters of Carnegie Tech and Penn State wind up abbreviated campaigns this afternoon as the Tartans invade Grove City and the Lions play host to Dickinson at State College. Other college crews of the district continue hostilities during the coming week, but all are slated to emerge from the trenches no later than next Saturday, though the Tri-State Conference will stage an individual title tourney June 2 and 3.

Strange as it may seem, Pitt, as well as Carnegie, is under the impression that it is to meet the Grovers today. Panther Manager Jimmy Moore having informed us yesterday afternoon that the Crimson outfit is to reel off a postponed contest at the Stadium at 2 p. m. Skibo authorities, however, announced last evening that they have definite confirmation of the date from Graduate Manager Bob Thorne, of the Up-staters.

Capt. Billy O'Loughlin led his Pittites to final clinching of the Blue and Gold's eighth consecutive undisputed city court crown yesterday by downing Frank Serany, Bluff star, 6-0, 7-5, and starting Grant Siverd's Dukes on the path to a 9-0 setback on the Stadium lot.

Meanwhile, the Panther yearling squad invaded the Bluff to carry off a 5-4 decision over the Duquesne frosh.

George Washington University netters defeated the Washington-Jefferson team, 8 to 1, at the Capital yesterday.

The Pittsburgh Tennis Association exhibition campaign gets under way at Vandergrift today. Dr. John O'Loughlin, Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, Bob Lampus, Frank Serany and Paul Sullivan are slated to make the jaunt, with possibility that Billy O'Loughlin will be added to the troupe, if his Pitt outfit proves to be idle.

Locally there will be open house at Stanton Heights and College Avenue with informal tussling listed on both layouts.

PIRATES PLAY DUAL BILL

club had enough runs on the sacks to tie. Finney ran for Padden and Jensen batted for Smith. The fleet Dane dropped a perfect tap on the grass toward third.

Pitcher Harry Seibold was in distress as he tried to stop Jensen. He threw in the general direction of first base while off balance. Rabbit, in some manner, managed to hold a toe on the bag while snagging the runaway toss in one hand. To may notion it was a great play and Jensen was out on a scant margin.

GIBBY EJECTED

Gibson, coaching at third, claimed Jensen was safe and when Umpire Pfirman gave the decision the other way, Gibby put on such a stormy scene he was chased. L. Waner then smacked a hit toward right, but the Rabbit grabbed this. He flipped the ball to Urbanski, and the Braves claimed a double play which would have ended the game, but Pfirman said "no" and he was the central figure in another fuss. When play was resumed, Lindstrom flied to Moore.

Waite Hoyt, starting his first game at Forbes Field, was found for three runs in the first. He was derricked after Rabbit pulled the squeeze on him. French and Smith finished.

Lindstrom had several chances to put the Pirates in the game, but Fred couldn't do a thing in five times at bat.

PITT AND TECH GOLFERS MEET

The varsity golf teams of Pitt and Tech are scheduled to meet over the South Hills Country Club course this morning in their second clash of the season and of the week. Pitt won the first meeting, 5½ to 3½. The meet winds up Pitt's links campaign for the season.

The Wildwood and Stanton Heights Golf clubs will stage their official openings today with varied and attractive programs.

At Wildwood, more than 300 players have taken out starting times. At the conclusion of the golf play, a smoker will be held for members and friends.

big, ruddy fellow grinned w good nature upon them.

Babe Ruth was keeping promise to visit the six orph boy heroes who flagged an E train May 3 and saved the li of 300 passengers.

Ruth already had invited th to be his guests at the Yan Stadium today, but just dropp in to pay a personal call first.

BABE BRINGS PRESENTS

So unexpected was his vi that the boys were at school. F kindly, white-haired Mrs. M Crea, who has charge of t home, sent for them and beam as the Babe dumped an armlo of baseball bats, caps and nec ties on the old-fashioned h sofa.

Babe explained that he lik children, adding:

"I've got two myself."

Then the young heroes arrive tried for a minute to keep th company manners, but gave it and let out a joyous whoop:

"Hello, Babe!"

The big home run king w practically felled by enthusias boys for a while, and then t Babe indicated the presents, sa ing:

"Here's some stuff for yo kids."

Overjoyed, one of the bo cried:

"He's gotta show us how t bat!"

LEARN FINE POINTS

They all went out to the hor plate and one by one they fac the pitching box while the Ba showed them how to hold the bats and just how to step in 'em, while "poor little rich boy peered enviously through t fence.

And today the lucky six, t gether with 19 other boys a girls from the home will atte the game at the Yankee Stadiu en masse, as the special guests Babe Buth.

COX HOME AGAIN, SEES F. R.

After a conference yesterday with President Roosevelt, Father Cox was home today and will broadcast, as usual, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the pulpit of Old St. Patrick's Church over Station WJAS.

He probably will tell the personal side of his visit and reception at the White House during this broadcast.

Tomorrow there is another Sunday food show benefit for Father Cox. It will take place at the Triangle Theater, East Liberty. A splendid program of pictures is promised by Manager W. D. Davis, and donations of food will be the only requirements for "tickets" at the door.

Father Cox is urgently in need of a new supply to take care of the hundreds of families who come to him for help and urges all who attend to display a liberal spirit.

Father Cox is getting another check from the Sun-Telegraph today in his subscription drive. These checks come to him regularly every Saturday and go a long way in furnishing food for his daily breadline of unemployed men and boys.

Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

MOTHER LOSES DEATH RACE

A Pittsburgh mother's race to the bedside of her injured son yesterday proved futile.

John Crawford, 21, of 517 Emerson avenue, a cadet major at the Tennessee Military Institute, Sweetwater, Tenn., died an hour before his mother, Mrs. Frances Crawford, arrived there. He had been injured when an automobile in which he and two other students were riding crashed into a truck. The others were uninjured. Crawford would have been graduated from the junior college in two weeks.

Mrs. Crawford is bringing the body to Pittsburgh tomorrow for interment on Monday afternoon.

Besides his mother, he leaves three sisters and a brother.

Portage Men Given $10,000 for Injuries

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., May 20.—(INS.)—James A. Sloan and Laurie C. Sloan, of Portage, won a $10,000 jury verdict from George P. Childress, of Chicago, for injuries suffered in an auto collision at Duncanville.

BOND DEFAULT SEEN BY DEWEY

HARRISBURG, May 20.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania communities whose funds are tied up in closed banks will have to default their interest payments on bonds unless some means is found to release their money, Secretary of Internal Affairs Philip H. Dewey said yesterday.

He made this statement in a letter to Senator David A. Reed, asking Reed to urge action on his proposed amendment to the pending federal mergency banking bill, to permit local government units to withdraw deposits from closed national banking institutions.

Dewey told Reed that state records show many municipalities have been handicapped because of inability to withdraw money from closed banks.

STATE SALES TAX DRIVE ON

HARRISBURG, May 20.—(AP.)—Payments of the state emergency 1 per cent sales tax had fallen far short of the estimated return of $12,000,000, and the Department of revenue has dispatched agents into the field to collect amounts due from delinquents.

The department today had announced that all payments total only $8,974,644. Receipts had been estimated at $12,000,000.

Approximately 20,000 taxpayers chose the installment method and paid half on April 1.

Half of these taxpayers, the department said, completed their payments on May 15 when they became due, but the other 10,000 refused, saying they did not have the money.

D. Sauters plan of lots at McDonald, Pennsylvania, said lots having a front of twenty-five (25) feet each on the north side of Lincoln avenue (formerly Noblestown road) and extending back of even width one hundred and twenty (120) feet to an alley upon which is erected a two-story concrete brick and frame building used as a public garage and dwelling apartments.

Being the same two lots which were conveyed by Clemantina Voye to Marcelain W. Voye and Remmy P. Voye by deed dated April 19, 1919, and recorded in the Recorder's Office of Washington County, Pennsylvania, in Deed Book, Vol. 465, page 672.

Taken in execution as the property of Marcelain W. Voye, Anna V. Voye, Remmy P. Voye, at the suit of G. L. Ducray. Assignee of A. C. LeComte, Trustee.

Sheriff's Office, Washington, Pa., April 28, 1933.
Attest:
J. A. SEAMAN,
Sheriff.

Savage Paradise

By MARGARET MATCHES

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER V.

Among the ever-passing inhabitants along Casuarina avenue are half a dozen full-blooded Samoan women, wives or widows of German planters who more than a quarter of a century ago brought these women out to New Guinea. They are all related to one of New Guinea's famous characters, Queen Emma, and are of royal Samoan blood. They are aging now, and their figures have lost the smooth curves of their glorious youth. They carry themselves regally; the passion that burns fiercely in women of their race still smolders within their great, dark eyes . . . still has power to excite men who cross their paths.

These women continue to be an important influence in New Guinea. Beside their husbands, they have fought the jungle and reared great plantations out of virgin wildernesses. Unafraid, they have tamed savages and held them in subjection; unflinchingly, they have faced childbirth in the wilderness. With the new administration hard times have come; but they are carrying on with the remains of their lands, helped by their sons, hoping grimly that restitution will yet be made.

One of the most famous characters that ever touched Rabaul was Queen Emma. She came to New Britain years ago, during the rule of the German New Guinea Company, which was to New Guinea for a long time what the British East India Company was to the British colonies. She was the wife of a German planter, but was early left a widow. A splendid pioneer, she became a veritable queen in New Britain, her indomnitable will and personality conquering and holding the respect and obedience of hundreds of savages. With tobacco and calico she negotiated with neighboring chiefs for huge tracts of land. Her plantations and trading activities brought her a vast fortune. Her beautiful house, empty now, lies out at Kokopo, 15 miles from Rabaul. During her heydey, when her entertainments were as royal as the isolated island permitted, a scarlet carpet stretched from the drive into the house for her guests to walk upon. The house itself was supplied with expensive furniture imported from Germany, and was a priceless museum of paradise pelts and native curios.

AN UNHAPPY MARRIAGE

She was a gloriously beautiful woman then, and fully conscious of her power. She took a second husband, was again widowed, and then accepted a third, an Australian. She was no longer young by this time, her beauty was fading. After the war was over she carried this new young husband abroad with her; also a favorite young mary as her personal servant. They set out for Europe, to see the world. They lingered at various capitals. They were a strange trio wandering through the continent—a young, dissipated Australian, an elderly Samoa wife, and a savage girl.

At length they reached Monte Carlo. The husband was a ne'er-do-well squanderer, and was profligate with his wife's money. She, in turn, knew well the ways of pacific island life, but little of European sophistication. Monte Carlo didn't help matters, and by this time she was desperately unhappy. She adored her young husband, but he had no unselfish interest in her; his love was dead, if it had ever existed, and her beauty was quite gone. His infidelities were many and protracted. So, one day, she shot him, and a few minutes later committed suicide.

MONOTONOUS PLACE

But pity most the poor half-breed children of these Aryan-Samoan alliances. There are a number of them in the islands—beautiful, amoral, wilful, wretched. They seem to inherit few of the good traits of either parent. Educated among white in Germany or Australia, they are aware of their half-white blood. Their oblivion lies in alcohol, and it is when they are drunk that the unrestrained "kanaka-true" stands forth.

One of my reasons for wandering out to the South Pacific was to escape monotony. But there the deadliest monotony in the world exists. The South Pacific is no place for a white woman to live—not indefinitely. Too many servants do away with the interest of housekeeping. The enervating climate discourages exercise of mind or body. There is the usual amount of erotic intrigue which is a part and parcel of every tropical settlement, too insincere to have any relationship with love. But the curse of the white population is gossip. A newcomer soon learns, after weathering the first sense of outrage, to accept even libel with weary indifference.

There, if anywhere, social ambitions would seem to have no place. In the old days the Germans did not permit white women in the islands; wise, that was, from any point of view. Today women have brought with them in miniature all the inanities of social ambitions and social barriers that civilization has ever concocted. In Rabaul, a cannibal island, a "clark's" wife is not invited to tea with an executive's wife, who is herself on but a nodding acquaintance with the "administration crowd," and the Governor's wife, high on Namanula Hill, "speaks only of God."

NEW GUINEA MEMORY

And then there is the New Guinea Memory. I first heard of it long before I entered the islands; from Dian, down in Sydney. There, a half-dozen islanders had amused themselves by recounting the evils that would probably befall me out in the archipelago. I treated the forecast lightly, though there wasn't one of the half-dozen that hadn't paid toll to the tropics. Now, as the weeks of my life in the islands passed, it began to seem that none of the major afflictions were to befall me. Though I took no large quantities of quinine, I felt no fever. Coral was a very present danger if one swam; danger from a scratch of it might cost a limb, or even life. Organisms might get into one's ear and cause excruciating suffering.

But I gradually came to believe in the New Guinea Memory. All day the throb of tom-toms beats into one's brain, all night through one's sleep one never knows the peace of complete silence. All this insinuating, unobtrusive distant rhythm lulls something that was once active in one's brain. What I had first thought to be a fantastic fiction descended so imperceptibly that I scarcely realized the veil. Gradually I too fell into the illusion that here in these sunbeaten, fragrant days and soft nights only the present was real. If the future held problems, maskee! Maskee is an island word meaning "It makes no difference." The past became gradually dreamlike. I found that energy was wasted, since no one else possessed it. The days when I had been an ambitious worker receded into a remote limbo of life. Letters from home, for the time of their perusal, were a sharp counteractive.

COULDN'T REMEMBER

I received them gratefully and looked forward to them in the long intervals between mails. But they finally came like news from another planet, bringing the people and associations mentioned in them into brief and sharp relief. I found myself groping for a thought or a name that vanished as I was about to utter it. Out there, where little news of the world seeps in, and can be of little personal importance, how can the rest of the world matter much?

For some time, after returning from New Guinea, I wasn't aware of the full havoc of the New Guinea Memory. For a while after my return I was still living in the islands. I could not remember things as I should, and must if I were later to survive in New York. I have jerked myself out of it now, but I have occasionally felt as I might if after a paralysis I were teaching myself all over again how to walk.

Summary

Alone and lost to the world, Margaret Matches left New York on what proved to be one of the most amazing and hazardous journeys ever attempted by a white woman.

Today she tells of some of her experiences in Rabaul, where on a small island, the roads of the world cross. Later she will tell of her experiences among the savages of New Guinea and the Admiralty Islands, of her strange contacts with curious people in far-away places and of many other instances during the course of her fascinating trek through a savage paradise.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Right back of the evening frock is where designers have concentrated the greatest detail. Thus a frock of red chiffon is severely plain in front, but in back is a mass of cascading ruffles from waist to hem.

Certainly you'll wear a coat this spring, even if you are addicted to suits. A most useful model is a coat done in navy blue wool crepe. If has a capelet over each arm and smartly tailored revers of mink. It is slim and high waisted.

SOLAR AND SIDEREAL TIME

Due to the moving of the earth on its orbit, more than 360° rotation is necessary for any point to come in line with the sun again, so that the solar 24 hours are longer than the actual time of one rotation of the earth. If the time of rotation is taken with reference to a certain star, sidereal time is obtained. The true period of the earth's rotation is found to be 23 hours 56 minutes 4 seconds. It is equipped with two 10,200 k. w. turbine generators, each supplying one of the two 13,250 h. p. synchronous motors—coupled to the two propellers—with 4,000 volts of alternating current. As all moving parts rotate, operation is quiet, resulting in comfort to passengers. Right: Diagram of engine room. (Transportation).

THE CHAMBER PROCESS FOR MAKING SULPHURIC ACID

By burning pyrites, SO_2 is produced. This is mixed with air and passed upwards through the 'Glover Tower' (filled with broken tiles) where oxide of nitrogen is added. Then the gases enter large lead-covered chambers, where steam is introduced and diluted sulphuric acid formed. This is concentrated by evaporation. Sulphuric acid is the most important chemical product because it is used in numerous manufacturing processes. (Parsons: Everyday Science), (Science).

East and West Shall Meet

The neatest fun we get out of the beach is to watch a man from the Middle West grab his first look at the ocean.

He walks to the boardwalk rail, looks East and jumps back quick.

Then he looks East again, blinks his eyes, looks East, jumps back, reaches for his hat and counts his money.

He helps himself to another stare and mutters to himself. He thereupon looks backward over his shoulder to make sure the crowd hasn't stymied his retreat to the Middle West.

Another look toward the 20-mile horizon and he settles down to some intensive gazing. He waggles his head, feels for his railroad watch and consolidates his elbows on the rail.

He manages to swivel his neck around for a 70-mile look to the North and sidesteps hurriedly. His head comes around as slowly as a panorama camera and there ain't nothing to the South but ocean, surf and sky.

He's good for three hours on the boardwalk rail until his wife grabs him and they put on their bathing frocks. Those smart alecks in the bath house always give him a worsted jersey that reaches his ankles and charge him for the trunks too. His first step on the sand tickles his toes and he is happy. It takes him another hour to reach high water mark. When he dips his toe in the water he yells and jumps back to the railroad station.

He finally picks out a three-year-old baby girl and thinks, "I'll go in as far as she does."

That's a start. Then a wave smacks him among the face and he's initiated. After that, he is the ringleader. He starts out for Europe with no food. The life guards rescue him 17 times, drag him on the beach, pump out his cellar and back he goes. He stays in the water from morning to night. At midnight the exhausted life guards hang a red lamp on him so they can pick him up by sight instead of sound.

He stays in there 20 hours and works up a brand new sunburn with blisters that have a stagger tread and 36 pounds pressure all around. They put him to bed for two weeks, rub him with linseed oil, fan him with their hats and finally bring around. He goes back to Iowa convinced that he has had the greatest vacation a man ever took. And he has. We envy him.

The Funny Tariff Truce

American Diplomacy Ignores the Right of the American Home Market to Protection.

The so-called tariff truce is about the funniest product of diplomatic midwifery that could be imagined.

It is swathed tighter than the wrappage of an Egyptian mummy, in provisos, reservations, footnotes, escape clauses, options for termination and rights of withdrawal.

In addition to all these get-aways, it is expressly subject to verbal reservations announced by each of the parties to it at the time of giving their carefully qualified and obviously insincere assents. These, it was insisted, should not be made a matter of record, but should be left to each nation to interpret for itself.

And what is the truce anyway?

Why, merely an agreement that the signatory governments will not, before June 12 nor during the economic conference which convenes on that date "ADOPT ANY NEW INITIATIVES" looking to their individual advantage in the markets of the world, and that present measures of all kinds which operate as thwarts to international trade shall "NOT BE INTENSIFIED" pending an opportunity for the conference to deal collectively with tariffs in general.

As for England, it is expressly understood that she may, without hindrance by the truce, carry to consummation the additional trade conventions which she has had under negotiation for some time past.

The truce to the contrary notwithstanding, the several trade conventions between England and Norway, Sweden and Finland, giving British trade exclusive advantages in those countries, will be concluded, in addition to the Anglo-Danish treaty which was agreed to while the tariff truce was being negotiated.

Nor does the truce cause France even a moment's hesitation in pushing her plan to bind her colonial possessions into an economic union with herself, thus achieving, according to her announced purpose, a French trade empire which shall be independent of the world.

Is it any wonder that the London dispatches speak of the tariff truce as full of loopholes?

The British reservations are already cited in England as permitting the unrestricted continuation of the present taxation upon imports, while France has already celebrated the truce by new week-end decrees raising her trade barriers higher than ever before.

What shall be said of an American economic policy which ignores every claim of the American home market to protection against a world organized to invade it?

What shall be thought of a national outlook which plays ducks and drakes with the American exporter whose business is blocked by new and ingenious barriers invented from day to day and defying all attempts to cross them?

What shall be said of a program which ignores all these ACTUALITIES of our situation and pins its hopes to an economic conference, the possibility of whose success is held wholly impossible in thoughtful quarters, and which may never even be held?

What shall be said of a "tariff truce" which is a joke to its signatories and is admittedly nullified by the reservations which accompanied its signature?

And finally, what shall be said of an American diplomacy which negotiates a futility of this kind and then points to it as an achievement?

Relief Demand Checked

Another Sign Appears That the Business Tide Has Turned—Comment on Local News.

Every month for two years the money required of the Allegheny County Emergency Association for poor relief has shown an increase over the requirement of the month before. But the rise has at last been checked. The budget for June will be the same as it was for May. Here is another impressive indication that the business tide has at last turned.

Another bomb outrage was averted yesterday in the nick of time. Two of the infernal devices were found outside the home of an Eleventh Ward politician. Dealers in dynamite and other high explosives should learn the identity of their customers, and the purpose for which the explosives are to be used. Something is wrong when racketeers can obtain bombs so easily.

*The Wood Street Association is to be congratu*lated on the interesting program with which it is inaugurating today Pittsburgh's "Dress Up America" campaign. The purpose of the campaign is to emphasize the new confidence that is being felt in the business outlook. Other businessmen's associations and Pittsburghers generally would do well to join in this campaign.

Another interesting demonstration that is being given today consists of an automobile parade, flag raising and salute, and appropriate addresses in recognition of the opening of the Wilkinsburg thrift gardens. Every community should place idle land at the disposal of people in modest circumstances for the purpose of raising vegetables and flowers. Wilkinsburg deserves a lot of credit for what it is doing.

County Treasurer Robert Cain is doing the right thing in investigating the character of applicants for beer licenses, with a view to keeping the business out of the hands of racketeers and other criminals. In his zeal to keep the business in clean hands, it is reported, Cain is inquiring into the court records of applicants, although not required to do so. Public sentiment will support him in this.

The American Weekly, to be issued tomorrow as a supplement to the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, has a humorous article that everybody will enjoy. It is entitled "How to Drink Beer Without Embarrassing the Mustache." The illustrations are remarkable. Another article discusses the movement in Germany to revive the old mythology and resume the worship of Thor and Odin.

Smiling at you from the front page of the Gravure Section of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph you will find a charming portrait of Miss Katherine Wholey, the lovely girl who recently was elected "Queen of the Campus" at Carnegie Tech. There is a good picture, too, of the mountain laurel, which has just been designated as Pennsylvania's state flower.

*A treat is in store for Sunday Sun-Telegraph read*ers, also, in Puck, the comic weekly. Jiggs, Boob McNutt, Tillie the Toiler, Barney Google, Mickey Mouse, Felix, the Katzenjammer Kids, and many other favorites of the funnies, are pictured in new hilarious adventures. Puck is packed with wholesome laughter.

Not Yet Out of the Woods

By Nelson Harding

The way is long, the pace is slow
Upon the journey we must go.
We've made some progress, it is true,
But trees we've passed, so far, are few.

And from that tree that's lying dead
We face the forest still ahead,
And all that tangle must be passed
Before we shall emerge at last.

Mussolini as the City Gentleman

BELIEVE!

OBEY!!

FIGHT!!!

MUSSOLINI, AND HIS MOTTO FOR FASCISTS

This photograph, showing the ruler of Italy in city civilian costume, shows the powerful dictator in a new role. You have seen him in military uniform and with his black Fascist shirt. Here you see him as "the city gentleman." And beside him you see written the three words that he seeks ceaselessly to impress on his Fascist followers: CREDERE, OBBEDIRE, COMBATTERE—"BELIEVE, OBEY, FIGHT."

The Fascists are to BELIEVE in the assured greatness of Italy, and in all that Mussolini tells them.

They are to OBEY the orders of Mussolini, implicitly and without question.

They are to FIGHT for Mussolini and his ideals, in accordance with his orders.

Most important of all is the word OBEY. No more nonsense, with each man deciding for himself, saying: "I will," or "I will not." Mussolini says: "YOU SHALL," and all Fascism replies: "Yes."

Pictures of Mussolini and new statements of his policies and intentions are studied with an interest constantly increasing.

How much power is in this pose, this square face and powerful jaw!

When that voice says: "Believe, Obey, Fight," there is but one answer.

What will happen when that voice is heard no longer?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Tieing the Love-Knot

One great advantage of marriage is that you can avoid so many dull parties by the simple expedient of checking your alibis in each other's name. But a spinster has only herself to blame.

It's a near-sighted love that can't see how to forgive a man, except by the light of a four-carat diamond—but some wives get quite a collection of jewelry that way.

No man ever doubted that he could "break" a heart-breaker, once he married her—and no woman ever doubted that she could tame a woman-tamer, once she landed him.

A lover, says Reno Ruth, is a man who brings you bouquets as a sign of devotion. A husband is one who expects to have bouquets thrown at him, every time he shows a sign of devotion.

When a man with a pint-size heart meets a woman with oceans of love to pour into it, the result is bound to be an embarrassing spill-over.

We can think of nothing which was more expressive of the "prosperity" era, than that ambition to marry the Boss' daughter, suggested by a Boston professor. But the college grad of today has no such exalted ideal. He knows that it would be a much better-paying proposition to marry the Boss' stenographer with a steady job.

The radio, says Reno Ruth, will never displace the baby-grande piano in the cultured home, because there isn't room on top of a radio for the empty cocktail glasses.

Nothing shocks and pains a man so much as a girl's cheerful readiness to cry quits, when he was trying to say good-bye without hurting her.

The critic on the hearth is a thing of the past. A modern man doesn't have to marry in order to have his diet prescribed, his drinks limited and his clothes chosen for him. He can get all that just by joining the Army.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Purely personal piffle: Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm is considered the biggest personality for the radio. And the best literary bet if he'll tell who started the war. A longing is to see J. P. Morgan shake the foundations of life with what Variety calls a "belly laugh." Or Justice Hughes turn a cart-wheel.

Few writers garland essays with such quaint phrases as Ben de Casseres. For years I pronounced Viscount Viz-count and invariably agree with a drunk, no matter how preposterous. Roxy is the most devout of all lovers of the friendly poker game. Boswell was the most observing of all commentators.

Marie Antoinette is the most fascinating woman in French history. H. V. Morton is England's best columnist. The neatest description of a famous cusser was, "his profanity poured forth like an anthem." No one is more beloved in the movies than Marie Dressler. Or on the radio than Ed C. Hill.

A. C. Blumenthal suggests a shortstop. I spent my time at a London lunch watching to see if George Bernard Shaw stuck to vegetables. He did. Only recently I discovered after-distress from eating boiled cabbage could be avoided by cooking it with cayenne pepper.

Outside of New York, New Orleans is the most delightful city for prowling. The most attractive hotel name is The Hollenden in Cleveland. A hideous, round-bellied spider makes me faintish. I can't use carbon paper without looking all ready for a mammy song. Or drink out of a paper cup without a squeam.

Tieing a necktie, I always hum "Over the Waves." Sometimes after reading a morning paper I ask myself, a little snootily, in what lies the majesty of the law? Nothing bores my wife like my efforts to tell of early poverty. Booth Tarkington was in his youth a wild one, but he never lost dignity. A boyhood hero was a chimney sweep with a handle-bar mustache. Lois Long gives the best of all impersonations of Lynn Fontanne in a love scene. Among America's clearest thinkers are Louis Brandeis and Newton D. Baker. Theodore Dreiser, a kindly fellow, strikes strangers as being unable to forgive the Almighty for letting idiots live. I like butter beans only cold.

Ramsay MacDonald, whose languor suggests saintliness, is the most admirable diplomat on the other side. I did not enjoy Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" until the third reading. The most shocking incident ever seen in public was in a Greenwich Village restaurant—a diner opposite plunging a hypodermic needle into his arm. And going on reading his paper.

No one has romped through life with the elfin gaiety of Lupe Velez. Or fit the term "just folks" like Maj. and Margaret Bowes. Arthur Hopkins is remindful of Wells' florid Chitterlow. Joseph Hergesheimer, as enormously able as he is, seems the least human of American writers.

Nothing is so refreshing as clean, snowy bed linen. I was recently one of four diners in the largest Chinese restaurant in town. About the most progressive of the young moderns is Walter Chrysler, Jr. I always long to clip a sheep dog around the eyes and I make a canary fluttery when no one is looking. The Sealyham is too lazy to jump off a chair. He has to be taken down. George S. Kaufman seems as little affected by success as anyone in the theater. I drag St. John Ervine's name into conversation by the heels now and then just to put across the pronunciation "Sin-jin." I can't enjoy a dish from the menu without first looking at the price. * * *

The most impressive wedding ever attended was that of Pierre Cartier's daughter to Ambassador Claudel's son. I choke up at marriage ceremonies and have to stifle giggles, born of hysteria, at funerals. Any flights over five steps I count. Fred C. Kelly has written the sanest stuff on investments. * * *

No tune gives a perk like Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys." Clyde Beatty could not make the Boston give him his paw. My only club is the Captain's in Dayton, O., which has no quarters or dues or ever held a meeting. The best answer to economics is Isaac Marosson's: "If all the economists in the world were placed end to end they would not reach a conclusion."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

A Hebrew friend has given me a present—a strange present. Perhaps it wouldn't mean much to you. It wouldn't have meant much to me once. But now—

Now I think it means more than anything else on earth. Yet it is only a little pin—a scrap of metal so small that it can hardly be seen, as I clasp it to the lace above my heart.

But, careless as I am about most other things, I cannot clasp that scrap of metal carelessly—or wear it without a little terror, a great longing and a vast regret! For on it are engraved the Ten Commandments.

The Ten Commandments. Do you remember when we learned them—you and I—long, long ago? That shabby Sunday school room, with the straight, stiff benches, from which our young, rebellious feet dangled so restlessly?

"THOU SHALT HAVE NO OTHER GODS BEFORE ME."

(Other gods? What did it all mean? Who wanted gods? How red the roses were outside the window sill! How gay and gold that butterfly, against the sunny sky! Why did you have to sit and learn those stupid words when all the world was full of Pirate Caves—or there were acorn dishes waiting on the big, flat stone?)

"HONOR THY FATHER AND MOTHER."

"THOU SHALT NOT KILL."

"THOU SHALT NOT STEAL."

"THOU SHALT NOT BEAR FALSE WITNESS."

Oh, great, grim words! Oh, little, dreaming child! Terror of Sinai and vast, veiled glory of God—how far away it all seemed on that sunny day. But, with each darkening year, how near those words have come!

For they were life—those words. How could anyone escape them? They were the story of all lives that had gone before; and of all the lives that lay ahead—all the poor, bewildered, struggling lives since man first began. Life mired in swamps—trapped in jungles—chained in slavery—fleeing across desert sands—weak, helpless, terrified, starving—trying to make a nation of itself—trying to find a law for itself.

(As you and I have fled! As you and I have groped.)

And then—God's gift of Law. That glimpse of beauty, truth and harmony, so radiantly received; so soon, so terribly soon to be forgotten. Yet never quite forgotten.

And now I pin the Ten Commandments above my heart—with tears! Almost 50 years since I learned them first. Most of them I've broken. Never a one, but I wished to break! How many other gods have I had? How often have I borne false witness . . . coveted . . . and grabbed! What did a few old laws matter?

But now I see so clearly that they're all that matters! They are all that we have!

Out of our thousands of years of struggle—out of all our dreams and rebellions, our pride and pomp, our prayers and sacrifice—they, and the gentle vision of another Jew, are our heritage.

Ten Commandments. Ten simple laws groping toward Beauty and Truth, Decency and Order—they are our greatest human measure!

Nations shift. Empires crumble. Fame passes. But, fixed as a star in the darkness, the soul's bright dream goes on.

And so—I wear the Law above my heart. Break it again? Yes. God only knows how many times. And yet—

The Law goes on! Goes on because we wish it to go on, in spite of all our sinning. For they were not really written on slabs of stone, those first short covenants between God and man. They were written on the heart of man himself—in his foolish flesh, in his muddled brain, in his groping spirit.

And so, though we break the Law a million times—you and I—still will we keep it. Still will we hand it on!

Until, at last, God's "will be really done."

FRIENDSHIP

By Winifred Black

What, drop in on a friend for an hour's chat, and never even telephone her, to say you're coming?

Why the idea?

What if the beauty doctor is there or the bridge teacher or the children's teacher come to complain about Junior's behavior at school, or perhaps that queer old aunt from the country—the one she never likes to introduce?

And your friend may be writing letters or calling people on the telephone, or trying on a dress to see whether it will do for the dinner or not, and she may be getting ready to go to a concert and she with only one ticket in her purse, so she couldn't invite you to go. How embarrassing that would be.

No, it would never do—don't think of such a thing.

People are too busy now to take time to see their friends, no matter how tried and true they are, and as for making new ones—tut, tut, what an old-fashioned idea.

Acquaintances—oh, dozens of them, scores of them—old and young, rich and poor, "artistic" and just plain common sense.

A party at the McDougal's Monday night, studio affair, young men who croon the newest songs, elderly gentlmen who sing "Goodbye Summer," and look around in triumph if they get the last goodbye out without a break in the upper register.

Women in smocks and long earrings, girls in pajamas and one or two in what looks like their brother's clothes.

Tuesday night a dinner with the Smiths. Very smart, very formal.

Wednesday night the musical comedy with an out-of-town customer of Tom's. Thursday night a few people in for a bite and a sup and a radio concert, oh, eight or 10 of them. And so it goes, from week-end to week-end, never a minute for a quiet honest talk with a quiet, honest friend.

Nobody knows you and nobody cares whether you know them or not.

You're just another new dress at the party, just somebody to fill in at the bridge table. Love and hope and fear and despair, may be waiting for you in the place you call home, but you'll have to meet them—alone.

None of your gay "friends" want to be bothered with what they love to call "misery moans."

Do you know, sometimes I think I'd like to go back to the old days and sit down with a friend for a good honest talk—sometimes I wonder just what we get by all this fussing and fretting and preening and posing for a lot of strangers who wouldn't know the difference if we died of starvation tomorrow and wouldn't want to be bothered to hear about it, anyhow.

Old friends, old books, old songs, men and women who know your faults and love you anyhow—what a relief it is to have these for company once in a long, long time.
